Russia on the Crisis.
Rogers on Russia.
Ziegfeld on Man's Nature.
Aguinaldo's Bright Plan.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

RUSSIA, POSSESSING a poor opinion of "capitalist governments," unable to keep their men at work, says Europe's crisis will not be solved.

Russians, discussing the situation seriously, find that banks are afraid to lend, Europe does not want to finance German industrial competition, and France is determined that Germany shall not gain strength to become an armed menace.

WILL ROGERS, fairly accurate barometer of American opinion, changing some of his ideas on Russia, sees fairer weather ahead for that country.

He says in yesterday's Sun-Telegraph:

"Those rascals, with all their cuckoo stuff, have got some mighty good ideas."

One of our leading American capitalists, educated in the conservative atmosphere of Eton and Oxford, Rogers cannot bring himself to unconditional praise of gentlemen that talk about "dividing property," but, contemplating Russia, the pensive philosopher on rope and bank account says:

"You can't beat hard work, sacrifice and unlimited resources."

RUSSIA WILL force serious thinking on many distinguished American bank accounts in the course of her efforts to change a great nation from agriculture to industry.

But there is nothing to worry those bank accounts. If Russia should fail, because of popular objection to hard driving, which seems improbable, that would settle it.

If Russia succeeds, adding one to the world's enormously productive, rich and prosperous nations, that will add to international prosperity. And, as Will Rogers can tell you, when individuals or nations get rich, they lose all impulse toward communistic "dividing."

PRESIDENT HOOVER wires Senator Capper, of Kansas, that the moratorium on war debts will have a healthy reaction upon the price of wheat. Kansas replies that something "healthy" is needed.

Kansas farmers, contrary to custom, have not begun plowing for winter wheat. Their crop, from 12,500,000 acres, and their harvesting season have been perfect.

Costs have been lower than in many years—labor $2 a day, gasoline for harvesting machinery delivered at the farm, 5 2-10 cents a gallon.

At present prices, wheat worth 15 cents will seed an acre. But there is the trouble. Wheat on the farm is worth 25 cents. With the 15 per cent increase in railroad freight rates, undoubtedly coming, freight to Liverpool, where world prices are made, would amount to more than the farmer gets for his wheat.

PLOWING IN July conserves moisture for next year's crop, increasing it eight to 10 bushels an acre, but Kansas farmers are not plowing.

It is feared that many will lose their land to banks that hold mortgages, and the question is, what would the banks do with it? They might as well foreclose on Mr. Ziegfeld's Follies. They would not know how to manage farms, or Follies. Mr. Legge, head of International Harvester refrains from pushing farmers for payment. Wise bankers holding farm mortgages will do the same.

MR. ZIEGFELD, by the way, wishes you to know, from Alaska to Florida, that when you come to New York this summer, and see his Follies, you will see the greatest success of a highly successful career. No mortgage spectre frightens him.

If you glorify the American girl (phrase copyrighted by Mr. Ziegfeld) sufficiently, no depression, no European entanglements can prevent you "standing them up."

"Three things men will have, in good times or bad," says Mr. Ziegfeld, "yes, four; to-wit, female beauty, to inspire the mind, tobacco to soothe it, a little something to stimulate it, and a few shares on margin, to give it hope."

MR. AGUINALDO, Filipino leader, encouraged by the utterances of wandering United States senators, has a plan. He would have the United States give immediate freedom, with self-government and the other concomitants, to the Philippine Islands, while continuing for 10 years more the right of Filipinos to ship goods through our custom house without payment of duty.

"Your government, NO; your free markets, YES," is the program.

It ought to work profitably, especially if, with United States supervision gone, goods from all Asia could be shipped to us duty-free through Manila, for a consideration.

SOME AMERICANS would suggest a counter proposition, as follows:

Turn the Filipinos loose, to carry out their ideas, Uncle Sam retaining an adequate naval, submarine and airplane base at Manila, as of right since he owns the whole place, and as part payment for the millions we have spent there.

There would be no free custom house, of course; otherwise the Filipinos could not accurately gauge their capacity to take an independent place among the world's nations.

Virginia, 216 High road, who almost lost her life trying to save Antoinette. Walter Dobroski, 15, pulled her out. Stowe township firemen with an inhalator worked a half hour to bring her back to consciousness. Her first words were that Antoinette was in the Ohio River's waters, unknown until then.

Ignore Warning as to Undertow; Firemen In Rescue Role

Although warned of the treacherous undertow of the Ohio River at Porter's Hollow, Stowe Township, two girls waded too far out yesterday and only one came back alive.

Antoinette Vanek, 14, of 265 High road, Stowe Township, was taken from the river dead after rescuers had revived her companion, Virginia Evanko, 15, of 251 High road, who almost went to her death in a desperate effort at rescue.

Stowe Township firemen, who worked half an hour to revive the Evanko girl with inhalators, did not know she had been accompanied in the water until their patient recovered consciousness and told them.

Walter Dobroski, 15, of 18 Walter street, Pittock, a neighbor of the girls, heard the Evanko girl scream and went to her rescue.

The delegates, including those of the United States, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon and Ambassador Hugh Gibson, American envoy to Belgium, met in the Prime Minister's room in the House of Commons.

CROWD CHEERS

A large crowd thronged the street before Parliament building and lustily cheered each group of delegates as they arrived.

Some of the crowd jeered. A group of brown-shirted German Fascists shouted:

"Down with Breuning! Up with Hitler!"

The French and German delegates were greeted on their arrival here by Premier MacDonald. They had traveled together across the Channel after leaving Paris

TOWN HALL SITE FIGHT GOES ON

An adverse decision by the Dauphin County Court on a taxpayer's suit for the revocation of approval by the Department of Internal Affairs for the purchase of the town hall site, will not affect other suits pending in Allegheny County, unless it is to intensify efforts to prevent the town hall's erection. This was revealed today by former Mayor William A. Magee, counsel for John H. Palmer, in the appeal dismissed by the Dauphin County Court, and Oliver K. Eaton, who has litigation pending here. Magee also has another suit pending here.

Eaton Resigns; Clears Way for Steel Merger

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 20.—(AP.)—Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland capitalist, who sponsored the bitter fight against the proposed merger of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with Bethlehem Steel Corporation, today resigned as director and member of the executive committee of Sheet and Tube, it was announced at the company's offices.

George T. Bishop, Jr., of Cleveland, president of Continental Shares Corporation, succeeds Eaton as a director, and Frank Purnell, president of Sheet and Tube, replaces Eaton on the company's executive committee.

The changes were announced after a meeting of Sheet and Tube directors.

NEW YORK, July 20.—(AP.)—Rumors were quietly revived in Wall street that the merger of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation would be completed, on news today that Cyrus S. Eaton had resigned from the directorate and the executive committee of Sheet and Tube.

Comment was not available from Bethlehem officials, but it was pointed out in the financial district that with Mr. Eaton's retirement completion of the consolidation would now be logical, since Mr. Eaton had led the fight against the proposal.

The rumor has been heard frequently of late that a new accord was being reached which would result in a merger of the two companies, and possibly include some other smaller steel makers.

2 ARMY FLIERS DIE IN CRASH

NEWINGTON, Conn., July 20.—(AP.)—Lieut. Benjamin L. Lowery and his observer, Corp. Harold Strosnyder, were killed today in a collision of two United States Army airplanes over Newington.

The occupants in the other plane, Lieut. Francis Z. Kelly and Staff Sergt. David L. Spicer, leaped to safety with their parachutes. Michael Petnicelli, of Meriden, a civilian, was struck and seriously injured by one of the falling planes.

The two Army planes were flying in formation with four other planes from Mitchel Field to Rentschler Field, East Hartford. A commercial airplane was blamed by the surviving fliers for the accident. The aviators reported that the six Army planes divided simultaneously as the commercial ship sped toward them.

The maneuver sent two of the Army ships crashing into each other. They burst into flames as they struck the ground.

SNIPER KILLS 2 MEN ON WAY TO MINE

Gunman Hidden in Woods Fires on Workers; 6 Held After Canonsburg Riot

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 20.—(AP.)—Two miners were killed on their way to work today at the mine of the Raymond City Coal Company in Putnam County, one of the mines which answered a strike call in the Kanawha coal field July 6. The slayings were the first reported since the strike began.

Two shots were fired from a woods some distance away. Clarence Kyle, 28, a motorman's helper, and Cyrus Shelton Spaulding, 41, a motorman, were the victims. Kyle was unmarried. Spaulding leaves a widow and 10 children.

State troopers under the personal command of Supt. R. L. Osborn started a search of the mountains in the vicinity of the mine. The shooting occurred just as the men prepared to enter the mine for the day's work.

Kyle's father, Albert Kyle, his two brothers, John and Frank, and Clarence Hudricks were in the party. John and Frank Kyle ran to the mouth of the tunnel and pulled a switch, preventing 95 miners riding on another train from emerging into the open.

ASKS TO STAY AT JAIL!

—Husband There, Evicted Mother Brings Baby—

MRS. FRANCES MATEVICH, 22, AND HER BABY . . . JAIL FARE

Mrs. Matevich and Mildred, 5 months, at the county jail today as she called to beg Warden John McNeil to allow her and the baby to stay there with her husband, Michael, serving the first of two sentences. Jail employes took up a collection, seek charity for her.

MOTHER SEEKS JAIL SHELTER

Mrs. Frances Matevich, 22, with her five-month-old daughter Mildred, called on Warden John McNeil of the jail today and asked if she might stay.

She told McNeil that she hadn't eaten for two days; that she had no people; that she had been ordered out of her house in Library because she was penniless—and that her husband, Michael, had been in jail for nearly two months.

The jail employes made a hurried collection and she was given food.

But she cannot remain at the jail, even though her husband is there, McNeil said. He is trying to arrange with the City Department of Welfare to have some care given the young mother and her child.

Her husband has been in prison since May 11, serving on a disorderly conduct charge. He soon goes to the workhouse to serve six months on another charge—that of slapping in the face Julia Petrovich, of Library. Matevich was a miner.

BLAST PROBE SPEEDED, HE SAYS

McKees Rocks Group Told By Sleuth State Police Would Be of Little Aid

The bombing of Thomas J. Conley's McKees Rocks home July 8, which members of the Citizens' Committee of McKees Rocks insist was a reprisal against the independent leader, is still being investigated by county detectives. Today Alfred Williams, general chairman of the committee and J. J. Driscoll, chairman of the executive committee conferred with County Detective George W. Murren. The matter of bringing state police to the scene was discussed.

Murren told the committee that he is leaving no stone unturned to bring the bombers to justice.

CONDITIONS WORSE

Williams said conditions are getting worse. He asked if Murren did not think the importation of state police would have a good effect. Murren was quoted as saying he did not think it would make much difference if the state police were called in. If they were, he said, he would be glad to co-operate in every way.

An explosion and fire which wrecked a building at 821 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks, early yesterday is also being investigated by Murren.

Although investigators came to the conclusion that the blast and fire in the Chartiers avenue building was not the result of a bomb, the number of bombings in the Pittsburgh district within the last two weeks caused them to press the inquiry.

STORES WRECKED

The building destroyed yesterday contained a fruit, vegetable and meat store operated by Louis Lanza, of 825 Chartiers avenue, and a shoe repair shop owned by Thomas Saia. Saia's family dwells on the second floor, but was absent at the time.

The fire started in a storeroom in the rear of the building. A terrific blast, heard in the neighborhood preceding the fire, may have been due to an explosion of gas, Fire Chief J. J. Thuer said. He estimated damage at $5,000.

BLACK HAND LETTER

Lanza recalled, he told police, that several years ago he received a Black Hand letter. He did not, he said, believe that the letter had any connection with the fire.

County Detective John Geisler today revealed that he and other officers were working on a theory that the bomb may have been planted under Conley's home by mistake.

He said the house next door to Conley's was occupied by Frank Lacovich, now held for court following the reported finding of a still and liquor in his home.

FAIL TO REVIVE RIVER VICTIM

Police, United States Bureau of Mine workers and physicians worked inhalators over the body of John W. Miller, 30, of 522 Alpine avenue, for more than three hours today, after he had fallen into the Allegheny River, before they gave him up for dead.

Miller was working in a skiff, helping to repair Dam No. 1, at the foot of Twenty-second street, when he toppled into the water.

His body was recovered by fellow-workmen almost immediately and physicians expressed the belief that he was dead from a heart attack when he fell into the water.

He is survived by his widow and four children.

He said that the European unrest would result in a revived Roman empire ruled by an anti-Christ. Mussolini, he added, bears the earmarks of this anti-Christ.

He predicted the death of the Republican party next year.

MEN SHOT DEAD EN ROUTE TO WORK IN PIT

headquarters in Pittsburgh. He added:

"They came armed with clubs and brass knucklers, a drunken mob run riot, and stoned the platform. Their attack was so unexpected that it took our men off guard. They tore down an American flag and hit an old man who tried to defend it. This thing will do them more harm than good and it may cause their downfall."

THOUSANDS AT RALLY

A score or more persons were injured in the melee including Murray's 22-year-old niece, Mercedes Daugherty; his nephew, James Malone, and Fagan. Murray's wife was present, but escaped injury.

Between 4,000 and 5,000 miners were gathered at the rally in the Curry baseball field near Canonsburg. Burgess Cook acted as chairman and Fagan and Murray were speakers. The three occupied the rear of a truck. A National Miners Union meeting had been held a short time before at the other end of Canonsburg. At the conclusion of this gathering a march was organized on the U. M. W. rally.

As the group, consisting of about 300 men, women and children started its march through Canonsburg, Police Chief Harold Addis and two officers met them and escorted them through the town to Curry field. Addis said he understood the National Union leaders intended marching into the field around the U. M. W. meeting, and out onto the highway again.

MISSILES FILL AIR

Two officers remained at the entrance to direct traffic, and Chief Addis made his way to the speakers' stand. Instead of leaving the field, the National Miners Union crowd remained to hoot and jeer the speakers, and Addis, fearing trouble, called state police. Before the arrival of the troopers, however, violence flared when a brick was hurled at the speakers' stand.

Immediately the air was filled with missiles of almost every description. United Mine Workers surged forward to rescue their leaders and the fighting was furious, for about five minutes.

The trouble stopped almost as suddenly as it started, and within seven minutes after the fight began, the National Miners Union adherants had reformed their line and left the field.

State police, arriving about 10 minutes later, stationed themselves around the gathering and the five men and one woman were arrested as they continued to jeer the speakers. They gave their names as Annie Marcovski, Avella; Frank Batiste, Tony Servic and John Reski, of Strabane; Julius Hollis, of Belle Vernon, and J. Johnson, of Canonsburg.

SCORES STATE POLICE

Murray, commenting on the trouble after the meeting, declared:

"These few renegades are following a policy of riot and bloodshed, but they will soon disappear."

M. Stern, district organizer for the international Labor defense, issued a statement, in Pittsburgh, in which he condemned the state police for arresting six adherents of the National Miners Union. He said:

"Representatives of the National Miners Union have discovered that although six adherents of this union were arrested, only one of the United Mine Workers men was, and he was released. This indisputedly proves that the state troopers are committed to the support of the United Mine workers."

The International Labor Defense has called a conference of striking miners, steel workers and sympathizers to meet at 2157 Center avenue, July 27.—The purpose, officials of the organization said, was to prepare a legal fight for release of all strike prisoners.

Officials of the relief committee denied that money taken in Saturday's solicitations did not reach their fund. The only money that was lost, they said, was that which police took from arrested canvassers. They charged police with taking $4 from William Sichy, of Fairhope; $6 from Frank Shewshuk, of Cokeburg Junction; 60 cents from George E. Stern, of West Brownsville, and 40 cents each from Victor Kukler, of Bellevernon, and Andrew Pancok, of Daisytown, while they were prisoners in Central Station.

BOMB 'ORDERS' LAID TO REDS

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 20.—Six youths, coal miners, are in the county jail here today following a hearing before Justice of the Peace H. L. Schwartz during which they testified they had been instructed, at a National Miners' Union meeting, to bomb the residences of two coal miners.

Stanley Marczak, 17; Joseph Christunis, John Blazaus and Lloyd Stroud, all of Coal Center, were arrested by Washington County detectives in connection with the bombing of the home of Ralph Powell, a coal miner, of Coal Center, June 29.

James Turturice, 24, of California, and William Mauszer, 19, of Philipsburg, were arrested in connection with the bombing of the residence of Adolph Dobozansky, a coal miner, of Daisytown, June 29.

A boast of one of the youths that he had bombed the two places led to the arrest of the group, according to County Detective W. B. Dinsmore.

BIRTHDAY PLANE KILLS YOUTH

BUTLER, July 20.—Dr. and Mrs. Francis E. De Long, of Boyers, Pa., were prostrated at their home today over the death of their 20-year-old aviator son, Richard. He crashed near his father's farm Saturday in a small monoplane his parents bought him on his twentieth birthday, July 8.

Mr. DeLong

The boy had been working with his father's farm helpers, Elmer Gadsby and Merle Brown. He dusted off his overalls and took off for his father's home at Boyers. Ten minutes later he crashed.

Young De Long landed and took off from the farm several times a day, Hartley said.

"Tiger," as he was known at Butler Airport, received his commercial flying license June 16. He attended Grove City High School and Kiski Preparatory School and was the only child of the family.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at the home of his parents.

HOOVER EYES SESSION IN LONDON

Morrow and Dawes Called For Advice; Talk With Stimson Over Telephone

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—President Hoover surrounded himself with advisers today as the critical conference opened in London to attempt a politico-economic rapproachment between France and Germany.

Senator Dwight W. Morrow, (Rep.), of New Jersey, reached the White House this morning, and will remain there for several days.

Ambassador Charles G. Dawes also was at the White House today as a guest. He sails to return to his post at London tomorrow. Dawes and Morrow had breakfast at the White House before President Hoover returned from his Rapidan Camp.

A trans-Atlantic telephone conference with Secretary of State Stimson was held during the forenoon, with Acting Secretary of State Castle, Dawes, Morrow and the President sitting in at this end.

Stimson will have a free hand within the scope of the President's broad foreign policy, and administration officials have carefully refrained from declaring that Mr. Hoover's chief minister of foreign affairs will not discuss European politics.

Secretary Mellon, this government's other delegate, will take an important part in the financial deliberations. He will say what the American banking group might agree to in the way of credits.

Man Makes Profit On One-Acre Farm

EASTON, Cal.—(AP.)—Harvey Dewees finds that his one-acre farm is more satisfactory than a larger one and the returns are gratifying. He has under cultivation many varieties of flowers, including sweet peas, carnation, cosmos, stocks, marigolds, snapdragons, gladiolas, zinnies, larkspur, raggly robin and chrysanthemums.

Dewees doesn't depend on the flowers entirely, as he has lima beans, Kentucky wonder beans, stone and tree tomatoes, sweet corn and several rows of blackberries on his miniature farm.

SEVEN POWERS OPEN PARLEY

this morning amidst demonstrations of mutual good-feeling.

In one instance, Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, put his arms affectionately around the shoulders of Chancellor Breuning, of Germany.

The treaty of Versailles, drawn up in 1919, brought an end to the armed conflict with guns and bayonets. The London conference is intended to end the economic warfare which has been fought with "golden bullets," started by M. Clemenceau at Versailles with the dictum which has now become famous:

"This peace is merely a continuation of the war with other means."

For the first time since the Versailles conference, the United States is officially participating, instead of merely observing, in the conferences.

VICTORS NOT UNITED

But there is another vast difference between this conference and the situation which existed at Versailles. Now the Germans are not longer behind barbed wire entanglements, and the victors are no longer united in their stand.

The first aim of this conference is to find financial aid for Germany, and stop the international run on her finances to avert complete collapse of the German financial-economic structure. The sole issue appears to be Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's warning that Germany must have aid within a week or he will be unable to answer for the consequences.

Germans Fear Snag On Actual Loan Terms

BERLIN, July 20.—(INS.)—Although government circles declared Franco-German negotiations in Paris yesterday were "not unfavorable," the German public remained slightly nervous today over the situation.

Fear was expressed that the accord reached in Paris between Chancellor Bruening and Premier Laval might strike a snag when it came to agreeing on actual terms on which France would agree to co-operate in a loan to Germany.

GUFFEY BOOSTS ROOSEVELT'S CANDIDACY

Predicts Governor Will Get 66 Keystone Votes for Democratic Nomination

Describing Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt as the most outstanding, courageous and able executive and statesman in American public life, Joseph E. Guffey, former Pennsylvania Democratic National Committeeman, announced he would risk his political reputation on the prediction that the New York Governor would receive not less than 66 of Pennsylvania's 72 votes at the national Democratic convention.

Guffey, staunch supporter of Alfred E. Smith, said Gov. Roosevelt was the outstanding Democratic candidate for the presidency. With Pennsylvania and New York backing, the Governor would have a long handicap on any other prospective Democratic candidate, he declared.

Guffey's statement came, he said, following an extended visit among Democratic leaders in all parts of the state. He also held many conferences with Democrats representative of other states.

Hemphill Is Silent On Guffey Statement

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—(AP.)—John Hemphill, Democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania last November, in a formal statement today said he would not "give out any interviews" on the statement issued last night by Joseph F. Guffey, Pittsburgh, predicting that Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, would have 66 of Pennsylvania's 72 delegates in the National convention for the presidential nomination. Hemphill said:

"Sedgwick Kistler is our national committeemen and our leader in the state. I will not for self-aggrandizement or any other reason be disloyal to his leadership and embarrass him in his absence by giving out to the press interviews upon subjects as to which he is entitled to speak first."

Kistler is in Europe.

'Tragic Queen' Helen Happy In London, Denies Exile

LONDON, July 20.—(Universal.)—Helen, the "tragic queen," of Rumania, was in London today, presenting a picture of radiant happiness.

Seeking to forget the bitterness and unhappiness of recent years, the proud Grecian princess has smilingly and bravely come to England to make her home for several months as a neighbor to the Prince of Wales in a magnificent country house near Sunningdale.

She was dressed in a severely cut, brown tailored suit with an old fashioned knitted woolen skull cap. She was greeted by her mother, the former Queen Sophie, of Greece; her brother, Prince Paul; her sisters, Princesses Catherine and Irene, and her niece, Princess Alexandria. Her brother, ex-King George of Greece, arrived with her from Bucharest. Helen said:

"I prefer to be known as the Crown Princess of Rumania in spite of rumors I have not been banished from Rumania. I propose to return in October to see Prince Michael, my son."

Prince Michael will be 10 years old on November 7.

Wife Dies at Home While Minister Preaches

Countless friends are mourning today for Mrs. Augusta Kramer Ebert, 73, 168 Ulysses street, Mt. Washington, who died yesterday while her husband, the Rev. Adolph Ebert, preached the sermon from the pulpit his son had occupied for 16 years.

The Rev. Ebert left his wife, slightly ill, at home yesterday when he went to St. John's Lutheran Church, to preside in the place of the pastor, the Rev. George Schuster, vacationing. It was an event for both Eberts. Their son, the Rev. Otto Ebert, had occupied that pulpit for 16 years before taking a charge in Columbus, O.

The Eberts had lived in the Pittsburgh district 32 years. While her husband was pastor of the Boggs Avenue Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church, Mrs. Ebert was president of the Ladies' Aid Society. Advancing age had brought her to comparative inactivity, while he continued as pastor of the Christ Lutheran Church, Monessen.

Mrs. Ebert's principal interest was in the welfare of the young. For 23 years, at the Boggs avenue church, she had charge of the infants' department.

Her body will lie in state at the Mt. Washington church from noon until 2:30 p. m., Wednesday, preceding funeral services.

Mrs. Ebert leaves, in addition to her son, Otto, a second son, Edgar Ebert, a professor at Capitol University, Columbus, O., a daughter, Mrs. Augusta Fischer, of Pittsburgh, a sister, Mrs. Anna Kramer Ebert, and nine grandchildren.

FALL, CURSING 'HEARSE,' OFF FOR PRISON

Ex-Cabinet Member, Tired And Feeble, Continues 200-Mile Ambulance Trip

THREE RIVERS, N. M., July 20.—(AP.)—Albert B. Fall faced a 200-mile trip from his Tres Rios ranch today to the New Mexico Penitentiary, at Santa Fe, where he is sentenced to serve a term of a year and a day for accepting a bribe as Secretary of the Interior.

An ambulance, described by the former cabinet officer as a "damned hearse," awaited him for resumption of the journey from El Paso, Tex. His party, including Mrs. Fall and a grand-daughter, Martha Fall, arrived here Saturday night.

The halt was suggested by Dr. J. H. Gambrell, his personal physician, who said Fall had stood the trip fairly well, but was "feeble and tired." Fall had no visitors yesterday. He retired early last night.

At Santa Fe, preparations were made for the entry of Fall as a convict in the prison he helped, as a New Mexico legislator, to build.

HUDSON CLEARS 'MA' KENNEDY OF BLAME

Ready to Meet All Charges 'Like a Man,' Preacher Says in Avowal of Love

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, July 20.—The Rev. G. Edward Hudson wants the world to know that he will face the consequences of his marriage to Mrs. Minnie (Ma) Kennedy in a manner befitting her appellation of him as "what-a-man." He said:

"Let not the world blame Mrs. Kennedy for all the things that I, unwittingly, have brought upon her. I did not run away. I have not deserted her. Nor have I forgotten the love that made us one.

"When the proper authorities want me, when I can be of service to her or her friends, I'll be there like a man."

Hudson faces Mrs. Kennedy's annulment suit and possibly bigamy charges, in addition to suits for divorce by his former wife, Mrs. Margaret Newton.

He denounced as dastardly and cowardly the attacks on "Ma's" mental condition. She was cleared of these allegations, however.

Meantime, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, noted evangelist daughter of Mrs. Kennedy, was en route from Portland, Ore. She was returning for another wedding in the family, that of her son, Rolph, 18, and Lorna Smith, which is to be elaborately performed tomorrow.

William Bradley Smith, the ship's purser who married Roberta Semple, daughter of Aimee, won't enter Angelus Temple activities. Taking a job with an automobile association, he and Roberta have left the parsonage of the bride's mother, it was learned.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 20.—Shot in the side of the head in the office of the Warren Lumber Company early yesterday, Warren Crow, 20, son of the late United States Senator William E. Crow, died just as he reached the Uniontown Hospital. It is believed the wound was accidentally inflicted.

The dying youth was found by Bruce Steele, who had gone to the plant to relieve Crow as night watchman. Steele said he found Crow on the floor with the weapon partly under him. Police took him to the hospital. County officers said they believed Crow was examining a .38 caliber revolver or was preparing to clean it when the weapon was discharged.

At the organization of the lumber company by Senator Crow and associates the name of his son was given it. Although the company has changed ownership the name remained unchanged.

HUNGER MARCH AIDS JOBLESS

HENRYETTA, Okla., July 20.—(AP.)—Officials grappled today with the problem of alleviating conditions among the families of jobless miners and smelter workers which led, Saturday, to a "hunger march" through Henryetta streets by approximately 500 men, women and children.

Merchants and citizens doled out food and money and the "march" ended peacefully, but civic leaders were spurred to action by the demonstration. They adopted a plan for city and county improvement projects to provide jobs for the needy. They considered a proposal to establish a municipal commissary.

O. W. Byford, American Federation of Labor organizer for this district, estimated that 12,500 workers were unemployed. Most of them, he said, were miners. Adding to the unemployment situation, drought has damaged or destroyed gardens on which the needy had relied.

HARRISBURG, July 20.—(AP.)—Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, today called John W. Glover, Philadelphia, "a liar" in charging that the secretary was biased in favor of the Automatic Voting Machine Company, of Jamestown, N. Y.

Replying to a statement by Glover, in which he announced further plans to block installation of machines in Philadelphia by appealing to the local courts, Beamish said:

"Of course Glover is a liar when he intimates that there is any bias in the Department of State towards any voting machine company.

"This new fight of the Philadelphia gang is to prevent use of voting machines in the all-important primary of September 15.

"In the Supreme Court decision, that body paid its respects to Mr. Glover."

The court held that it was "outrageous" that installation of voting machines should be blocked by such taxpayers' suits.

COUNCIL SCANS MARKET OFFER

A second proposal that the Diamond Market House Protective Association take over management of the Diamond market from the Bureau of City Property, thereby saving the city $35,000 a year, was submitted to Council this afternoon. A hearing on the measure will be held tomorrow afternoon.

The offer guarantees the city a net rental of 10,000 a year for the first five years of a 10-year lease and $20,000 a year for the next five years, with privilege of renewal at an increased rental to be agreed upon with the city.

At present the city is losing $25,000 a year by operation of the market, according to a survey by the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board.

Under terms of the proposed lease the association would remodel the building at its own expense, dismantle the present refrigeration system and install individual electric units.

The terms of the proposal made today give the city a decided advantage over the terms of the first proposal made a few weeks ago.

"Mr. Snake Man" Busy Answering Queries

Mr. Netting, Carnegie Museum assistant curator of herpetology (a letter addressed "Mr. Snake Man, Pittsburgh," was quickly delivered to him), with one of his prize specimens. He's busy these days answering questions 'phoned or mailed him by apprehensive vacationers.

SNAKES FEARED ON VACATIONS

That potential vacationists worry about snakes has been a secret for a long time. But Graham Netting, Carnegie Museum's assistant curator of herpetology, has been getting fan mail for some time. One letter had the odd address of "Mr. Snake Man, Pittsburgh." The local authorities sent it to him.

Most of the questions, Netting says, involve the poisonousness and habits of reptiles in localities, where the vacationists are planning to go. Nearly all are from city folks.

His opinion drawn from his letters, are that:

"People are curious about animals they know least. Many fear what they don't understand."

U. S. in Peril of European Air Raids, Flier Warns

NEW YORK, July 20.—(AP.)—Lieut. Alford J. Williams, former Navy speed flier, arrived on the Leviathan today and expressed the opinion that, although civilian fliers have found it impossible to make successful non-stop westward crossings of the North Atlantic, European military planes could make the the flight and bombard the United States seacoast. He said:

"They most certainly could. We know only of the commercial attempts or private flyings. Wait until we see what the military planes of Europe can do."

Lieut. Williams said this country was far behind Europe in development of fast planes. He added:

"I don't know what is to be done about speeding up our air service. We are content to go rocking along with 600 horse power when there is every indication there will not be an entry in the Schneider Cup races in September with less than 2,000 horsepower. I have done everything I could to bring to the attention of the powers in aviation the importance of our at least measuring up to the pace set by the Europeans, but there is no shaking the people who dominate aviation out of their apathy."

Lieut. Williams went to Europe to invite foreign fliers to participate in the national air races at Cleveland in August and September. Among those who accepted are Flight Commander R. L. R. Atcherley, of Great Britain; Maj. Mario de Bernardi, of Italy, who won the Schneider race in 1926; Ernst Udet, Germany's wartime ace of aces, and Capt. C. Orlinski, one of Poland's leading fliers.

Police 'Save' Jungle Boys From Harlem Racket

NEW YORK, July 20.—(AP.)—Manuel and Disonar, two coal-black African youths from Uganda, brought here by Martin Johnson, explorer, to take care of gorillas, had a police conservator today.

Things happened when the two were turned loose in Harlem, New York's Negro center.

A Harlem impressario had an idea that members of his race might like to hear the native tongue of their forefathers. They did. Thousands paid 50 cents each while the boys jabbered. The boys received a dollar bill and a pair of pants per lecture.

They did this a week. Each has seven pairs of pants. They spent their money on subway rides, spats, shorts, shirts and ice cream. The impressario made several thousand dollars.

Then somebody with ideas on capital and labor chiseled into the case and gave the two Ugunda citizens a pep talk.

Mr. Johnson received demands for union wages, $5 a day; hotel room downtown; automobile and shiny shoes.

He appealed to the police, setting forth he had promised a native chief that the two would be returned to Africa in good condition. A police lieutenant agreed to see that civilization does not spoil them. The boys were awed by his shiny buttons.

The men were none the worse for their experience, all having succeeded in getting into two compression chambers when the water started pouring in. All were held in a hospital today, however, for observation.

MAJ. HAY BACK AS PARK AIDE

Maj. A. B. Hay was today sworn in as assistant district attorney after his patriotic vacation since June 15, when he voluntarily resigned to permit the temporary appointment of Earl F. Reed.

Reed, who had charge of the graft investigation before the grand jury, which resulted in the indictment of Mayor Kline and former Director of Supplies Bertram Succop, notified District Attorney Park that he had other work pending which was incompatible with his duties as assistant district attorney.

Park said that Reed would assist in the trial of the Mayor and Succop as private counsel, and explained that it would not be necessary for him to be an assistant district attorney to participate in the trial.

Maj. Hay is the oldest practicing attorney in Allegheny County, a former district attorney and assistant district attorney for many years.

COMMISSIONER QUESTIONS RATE RAISE

I. C. C. Member Asks as to Wisdom of Increase in Face of Low Commodities

WASHINGTON, July 20. (AP.)—The wisdom of raising freight rates when general commodity prices are declining was questioned today by an Interstate Commerce Commissioner considering the appeal of the railroads for a rate increase.

Commissioner Eastman asked Fairman R. Dick, of Roosevelt & Co., New York, a witness favoring the increase, if he thought it economically sound to put railroad rates so high, compared with other commodities.

Dick replied the railroads could not help it and that much of the charges was necessary to meet increased taxes and branch line operations.

At the outset of the hearings today, Eastman had inquired whether the "propaganda" of the railroads for an increase would not adversely affect investments. Dick replied he did not think so if the increase were granted.

Eastman said "ton-mile" charges for freight had increased 50 per cent since 1916, but commodities were 13 per cent lower than at that time.

GUSHER BLAST DEATH TOLL 8

MT. PLEASANT, Mich., July 20.—(AP.)—An oil field fire which wrote a ghastly finis to a celebration over the shooting of a "gusher" Saturday, had taken a toll of eight lives today, while seven other victims, terribly burned, fought death in a local hospital.

The 2,000-barrel well whose "shooting" attracted the victims and 200 other spectators to the scene, still was burning.

The well came in as a gusher shortly before a storage tank exploded from a cause as yet undetermined, showering the spectators with flaming oil.

Four of the victims died early yesterday, and four more last night. One of the first fatalities was Mrs. Walter L. McClanahan, wife of the principal owner of the gusher.

WALES KEEPS 'BRIDE BOOK'

T. C. WATSON
Universal Service.

LONDON, July 20.—Ever since the Prince of Wales was 18, gossips have been busy foretelling his matrimonial intentions. Rumor followed rumor. At first they amused the Prince, then they annoyed him; now he is taking them philosophically.

In fact, in his library at York House, St. James, there is a large volume containing clippings from newspapers which have reported his betrothal. The book is unofficially known as "The Prince's Book of Brides." Occupying many pages, it records in all languages his mythical brides-to-be.

The earliest story is dated 1912, and recounts that the heir to the British throne would shortly wed the Princes Victoria Louise, only daughter of the German Kaiser. There follow accounts of many reported betrothals since, in which are named the Grand Duchess Olga, eldest daughter of the late Czar of Russia, and the Grand Duchess Tatiani, the Czar's second daughter; Princess Yolanda, and Princess Giovanna, of Italy; the Prince's cousins, in Sweden; the daughters of his father's cousin, Queen Marie of Rumania, and Princess Juliana, of Holland.

STATE POLICE AT MINE MEET

SCRANTON, Pa., July 20.—(AP.)—With the consent of Gov. Pinchot, state police were assigned to duty outside the hall where the convention of District No. 1, United Mine Workers of America, was in session here today. State protection was requested by anti-administration delegates headed by Thomas Maloney, of Wilkes-Barre.

Despite the presence of troopers a fist fight broke out at 11 o'clock with a number of delegates exchanging blows. As state officials made ready to rush into the hall and break up the battle the warring factions quieted.

Turmoil and confusion prevailed most of the first two hours at the opening session because of the frequent clashes between administration and anti-administration forces. Maloney supporters attempted to take the power of appointing committees from the chairman and this led to bitter arguments and to the fist fights.

34 Arrested After Fatal Race Clashes

DADEVILLE, Ala., July 20.—(AP.)—Thirty-four Negroes, arrested in connection with attempts to break up "The Share Croppers' Union," were in jail today on charges ranging from conspiracy to murder to carrying concealed weapons while the International Labor Defense and Police Chief J. M. Wilson, of Camp Hill, engaged in a duel of statements.

Ralph Gray, Negro, was slain in a melee near Camp Hill last Thursday night in which Sheriff J. Kyle Young was seriously wounded.

Fight Move to Free Killers of Mexicans

ARDMORE, Okla., July 20.—(AP.)—Gov. W. H. Murray sought today to throw up a legal bulwark against the dismissal of murder charges against W. E. (Bill) Guess and Cecil Crosby, former deputy sheriffs, in connection with the slaying of two Mexican students here June 7.

A hearing of motion by defense counsel for dismissal of the remaining charges was on the docket and the Governor directed his special attorneys, who represented the state at the trial of Guess for the slaying of Emilio Cortes Rubio, to oppose them.

Mexican-U. S. Claims Meet Ends in Row

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—(AP.)—Today's newspapers printed a statement that the sessions of the Mexican-American General Claims Commission in Washington have terminated because of a dispute between the American commissioner and the neutral arbiter and that there is little probability Mexico will accede to an extension of the time limit for the commission to complete its work. The limit is August 31.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

THE FACT THAT HOPE springs eternal in the human breast is an old, old story. And the belief that man may be down but he's never out has long been a favorite of the Salvation Army. But nowhere—nowhere in the world—do these thoughts become more evident than on the street called Broadway.

On that boulevard, the dope fiend reaches out his hand and swears he can quit whenever he wants to. The drunken sot is certain that swearing off can be accomplished at a moment's notice. The burlesque chorine knows she could replace Lenore Ulric if someone would only give her the chance.

And so we come to the story of Charlotte Calliess, the former opera star, who visions past glories as she stares at the dull walls of a hall bedroom. If you think you are unhappy and your problems are large, you would do well to ponder carefully the case of Charlotte Calliess.

In the spring of 1897, just 34 years ago, a young girl walked on the stage of the opera house at Hamburg, Germany. She was tall. And beautiful. And only 18.

A crowded house of opera lovers looked at this girl. It was her debut. She had been studying for this day since early childhood. There had been vocal instruction from famous teachers. There had been long hours of practice. Long days of hard work. Long years of development. All for this day.

The girl opened her lips. She sang. Clearly. Beautifully. Softly. And when the curtain fell the audience rose to its feet. There were cheers. And loud cries of joy. The curtain rose and fell. And again. And again. The girl stood in the middle of that huge stage and bowed nervously. Her cheeks were flushed and her hands trembled slightly.

But inside her heart was singing. For Charlotte Calliess was a success. A great opera star at the age of 18 . . .

* * *

In a tiny room on West Thirty-eighth street, you can find a white-haired woman. She is only 52, but she looks to be 70. Her hands are unsteady. She can walk but a few steps—and they must be taken with the aid of two canes. She cannot stand erect, and every move brings her twinges of terrible pain.

Her room is small and not very pleasant. A sink. A dresser full of bottles and pills. Two chairs that are not very inviting. A bed. The ceiling is badly cracked. The paper on the walls is crying for assistance.

In one of those chairs sits that white-haired woman. She is talking to me—pouring out her heart. Her voice is low and beautiful. But there are no cheers now. And there is no applause. For Charlotte Callioss is no longer an opera star. She is just an elderly woman, destitute and alone. And the world seldom cheers this kind of person.

"Those years were so sweet," she is saying, "that I just love to talk about them. You don't mind, do you? I would sing my roles in all of Germany's greatest opera houses. Weisbaden, Stuttgart, Leipsic. Dresden.

"That engagement at Monte Carlo. That letter from Alexander of Hesse. The way society received me. Oh, those were happy years, I can tell you."

She is living in the past now. Her eyes are clear and bright. Her thoughts are carrying her out of hall bedrooms. She is sitting in palaces and conversing with queens.

"I can remember that party in my honor at Berlin. The wine. The love. The happiness of it all. Surely God was good to me in those days! . . .

* * *

Then came 1914. War. The beating of drums. The tramping of foot.

Two years of this. Charlotte Calliess had been singing for charity. She wanted to help the German cause. For, after all, it was her country. And it had been good to her in better days.

But now her finances were exhausted. She had her mother to support. And the opera houses that had not closed were open but a day or two each week.

There was but one thing to do. America was calling her. New York—and the Metropolitan Opera House! . . .

Once in New York, Charlotte Calliess soon found out that this was no day for German opera stars. The war, you know, and all that. She would have to wait.

She opened a school for vocal instruction on Riverside drive. Her mother lived near by. They were happy together. It was not quite what Charlotte had expected. But still—

It was Columbus Day, 1918. Charlotte had been out of town for several days past. She ran up the steps of her mother's home on West Eighty-third street. She hummed a tune. The world was not a bad place after all. The door opened and a voice spoke.

"How do you do, Miss Calliess," said the voice.

Charlotte asked for her mother. And the voice spoke again.

"Why, didn't you know?" it said. "Your mother was buried this morning."

The shock was too great. The muscles in her shoulders stiffened—and they have never relaxed. Charlotte Calliess fell to the street in a faint.

After that misfortune there was little left. She had loved her mother so.

The school was closed. Miss Calliess went to Chicago, and tried to get in the Chicago Opera Company. A secretary to Mary Garden returned her credentials unopened.

Charlotte saw that there was little left for her. She registered at the Congress Hotel, went to her room and swallowed two ounces of poison. Bue her moans were too loud. There were doctors and antidotes. And they would not let her die.

And so the years have flown. Back to New York. Out of one hospital and into another. And another. And another. But always those pains grew worse and worse.

Last week, in that tiny room, she found herself utterly destitute. And that was how I found her . . .

* * *

"I live as best I can," she says simply, "and no one can do more than that. The neighbors are good to me. I never know where the next week's rent is coming from—but I have had that experience before. And I have survived."

I looked at her. She seemed so helpless as she sat there. What was left in life for her? And I wondered.

"Tell me," I said, "do you think you will ever be able to sing again?"

She looked at me in amazement. Her blue eyes opened wide.

"Sing again?" she cried. "Of course I will sing again. If someone will only lend me enough to get started, I will repay him in full very soon.

"Of course I will sing again. What made you think that I wouldn't?"

Strange, isn't it?" . . .

Influencing a Bad Man's Reform Difficult Job

World, meet Disgusted Bets!

Why's she disgusted?

Because all men are liars—

How does she know?

Because two have lied to her.

Isn't that enough proof? It is for Bets. So when we encouraged lovelorn little Eleanor to mend her broken heart and smile for the True Love who'd be waiting for her just around the corner, Bets barged in with this—

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I have just read Eleanor's letter and your answer, and it sure made me boil!

LAUGHS AT IDEA

"So there is a 'Big Real Love' waiting for her around the corner, is there? Well, you'll have to show me!

"I am only 17, but I have seen enough of life and men to laugh at this 'real love' idea.

"I have only really cared for two men, but both of them turned out to be all wet. The first one admitted he was just a polite liar, feeding me a line, and said he hoped that some day I would find someone good enough for me. Bah!

"Frank, the other one, that I really am crazy about, won't even admit that much. When I started going with him, four months ago, he promised to stop drinking and running around. But did he do it! Oh yeh! He loved me so much he couldn't eat or sleep, to hear him tell it! But he didn't love me enough to do what I asked him to do. Three weeks before we were to be married, I found this all out. And oh Sally! It is almost killing me! Love! Bah!

CONCEIT DENTED

"There isn't a man in the world who is big enough and noble enough to be capable of such an emotion as real love, and I'd like to have someone try to convince me that there is.

"I don't suppose I'll ever see this letter in print, but I had to get it off my mind.

"DISGUSTED BETS."

So you've "looked 'em all over," have you sister, and decided that the whole world's hay wire—because you happened to run into a couple of wrong numbers?

Now I'll say a few "Bahs"—because you haven't even scratched the surface of living yet...and you won't for a good many years to come. When you do, you won't find much unless you change your theme song and learn to use sense in picking your Grand Pashes...

For you see, kid, you didn't get hurt because all men are cheaters. You were hurt because you're young and ignorant and conceited and inexperienced and, accordingly, fell for the first "hot line" that was handed you.

When the man laughed and rode away, you thought your heart was broken. But your conceit was dented, that was all. Actually, he did you no harm. You simply were due to cut a wisdom tooth...as all humans must do.

A COMMON AFFECTION

Then again, you decided to play the star part of being the Big Influence in a Bad Bozo's reform—and, when he liked his badness better than he did you, it simply shattered your own sense of importance.

All of which is just a part of the silliness of being 17. But that silliness isn't confined to 17. Many of us who are old enough to know better take our griefs and disappointments in the same way. We decide the whole human race has gone to the dogs, merely because someone has hurt us. And in reality, we probably wished our misery on ourselves by our own folly and conceit.

Buck out of it, youngster. I know it hurts now—but it's just life. The human race is a pretty good gang—you need to learn to pick 'em better, that's all.

There are as many fine men in the world as false ones—as much honesty and dishonesty ... as much kindness as cruelty. But you'll never find them, nor the happiness that goes with them, if you test them all by your own ignorant conceit.

Women Who Discuss Other Persons' Ages Annoying to Fay King

By FAY KING

"How old do you suppose she really is?"

"Well, she must be getting along, because I can remember away back in—of course I was only a kid at the time—but she—well she claims she is only—but—"

It always annoys me when women get into a huddle and put someone's age into circulation.

What difference does it make how old anyone is? I never want to know how old anybody is.

I like to think we are of one age—the age we live in. TODAY!

Not a day less or a day more!

We may not have been born yesterday, but all that any of us live is—today.

All age amounts to is the days we live!

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Household Pests Are a Menace to Health

A story is told of a man who asked his druggist to sell him 10,000 roaches, and a general assortment of other insect pests. He explained that he was about to move from the apartment in which he had lived for several years, and that his lease demanded he leave his apartment in the same condition he had received it!

Dr. Copeland

The roach is the most common and most offensive of the insects seen in present day habitations. There are no less than a thousand different types of this unwelcome pest. They are unpleasant and really dangerous neighbors. For many years they have been suspected of carrying various infections. As yet no definite proof of their part in conveying disease has been proved.

Roaches do most of their wanderings at night. They soil everything they touch.

In our modern apartment houses they are a great nuisance. They travel from one apartment to another, following along water and drain pipes. In buildings of moderate height they may travel from cellar to roof.

Cleanliness and keeping the food in jars and places that cannot be reached by roaches is important in exterminating them. All cracks and imperfections in buildings that may serve as breeding places should be eliminated.

The best poison for the roach is sodium fluoride, finely ground and mixed with meal. This should be liberally dusted in all corners, drawers, closets, crevices and runways. This powder is poisonous and should be carefully labeled as such and kept away from children.

Roaches must be considered as a menace to our health. In their migration from one apartment to another they feed upon breadstuffs, milk, clothing, cooked and raw food, and travel from sickroom to baby's room or to the family kitchen. They infest kitchens, storerooms and toilets, and undoubtedly aid in spreading filth and germs.

I believe too little attention is paid to these carriers of filth. Undoubtedly they play a part in health and disease and should be considered a menace just as are other disease-bearing insects.

The Cardiac Clinic

By DOROTHY ROE

Some like 'em hot,
Some like 'em cold,
Some like 'em sweet sixteen
And some like 'em old.

A clinic client writes asking the unanswerable question.

He wants to know the traits that go to make up an ideal wife.

In the first place, Mr. X, you must know that there is no such animal. Just as nobody yet has discovered a perfect husband. We all have to have a few faults, just to make us interesting.

Imagine living with a perfect wife, Mr. X. It would make you so self-conscious and uncomfortable that you'd probably end it all in the river some dark night, just from an overpowering inferiority complex.

Nobody wants an ideal wife. It would be too hard to ask her forgiveness. And that, you know, is one of our most pleasant and popular marital pastimes.

But to get down to business—the girl you would consider an ideal wife simply wouldn't register with somebody else. And your next door neighbor's choice probably would drive you to a sanitarium.

Happily, every man wants something different in his mate—if they all demanded brains, beauty, sweetness and light, a lot of us would be out of luck.

You've heard that old query—"What does he see in HER?"

It's a good slant on the matrimonial question. Maybe nobody else can see her charms, but to her husband she is the epitome of all that is desirable. And if he feels that way, that's all that's necessary.

The old idea that opposites attract also is all shot to pieces by a little observation.

Nine times out of 10 a fat man will have a fat wife.

And a man who likes the gay and the frivolous life probably will pick out a girl who can go dancing with him, and won't complain when he feels like coming in at 3 a. m.

A farmer will pick out a wife who can help with the cows and chickens.

And a literary man will choose a wife who will know what he's talking about.

An actor usually marries an actress—and if he's a good actor she has to be a good actress or she'll never merit a second glance.

Newspaper women usually marry newspaper men, because they are both keyed to the same kind of high-tension work and play.

There's just one point where the opposite theory works. A very masculine man is attracted to the extremely feminine type of woman.

And the man who lacks masculine aggressiveness usually chooses a wife who has it. The weakness of his nature demands a depth and strength in his wife.

Believe it or not, there has to be one clinging vine in every family.

Or don't you think so? If not, write to the Cardiac Clinic, Universal Service, 63 Park Row, New York City.

Household Hints

There is less danger of breaking if you wash your glasses in a wooden bowl.

Common rye meal or washed and dried coffee grounds are excellent stuffings for pin cushions. Neither filler will rust pins or blunt the points.

Oatmeal and other such foods sometimes cling to the sides of saucepans and much time and labor is spent in removing the remains. If the empty saucepan is filled with boiling water, then with cold, and left for a few minutes, the oatmeal will be easily removed.

Madge's Father Senses Owen's Hand in New Threats

My father had caught the slip I had made in speaking of Marion, and the lock-box with its secret compartment which she had inherited from her grandmother. He left me in no doubt about that when he stopped short in our slow progress to the house from the new lily pool, and faced me soberly.

"My dearest, if I am going to help you in this matter you must not withhold anything from me. Do you mean that Marion has shown the box to anyone else?"

"No; she hasn't," I said, "for the good reason that it was locked up in the bank deposit vault, where she could not get at it. But she has told her 'roomie,' Carolyn Brixton about the box and its secret compartment—Marion does not know herself what is contained in the three envelopes which fill that compartment."

"Carolyn Brixton," he repeated. "Of all people!" he added as if to himself, and I started violently. He knew, for I had told him of my distrust of Carolyn Brixton's stepfather, Samuel Brixton, and his half brother, Charles Owen, because of the attempt they had made to get Lillian to sign a "release" for herself and Marion, of all claims in the name of Marion's dead father, Tom Morton, against Brixton Morton's former business partner. The request had been plausibly and adroitly advanced as a side issue to a flamboyant proposition to restore $20,000 to Marion—money which Brixton, with an emotion which I felt was feigned, declared had been unjustly taken from his dead partner's estate.

I had been present at that interview, and it had been by my advice for her husband would hear nothing of the Brixtons or their errand, so jealous was he of that long dead past of Lillian's—that she refused either to accept the proffered money or sign any paper concerning it. When Marion was of age, Lillian told them, through me, she could decide for herself what should be done.

I acquitted Helena Brixton and her children, Carolyn and Ronald, of any conscious part in the scheme, which I felt—perhaps fancifully—that Samuel Brixton and his half brother, Charles Owen, were concocting against the girl's fortune. But I did not think it was an accident that had led Samuel Brixton to select Whitney Hall—Marion's school, as the establishment in which he wished to place Carolyn, and I felt that it was his influence, in part, which had abetted the close intimacy which existed between the two "roomies."

Several times since the attempted robbery at the farmhouse there had come to me the fantastic theory that Samuel Brixton or rather Charles Owen, whom I considered the brainier and the more diabolical of the two, was behind that abortive search. Was it possible that my father was entertaining similar suspicion?

"Do you mean—?" I faltered.

"I mean nothing now," he said, "except that more than ever I see many reasons why Lillian should be told this and not one against the revelation."

With his hand upon my arm he accelerated our pace ever so slightly.

"I hate to ask you to hurry dearest," he said, "but I must get down to the village as quickly as possible. I want a word with Underwood before I go, and I should advise you to see that both Richard and Lillian know about this as soon as possible. You must not carry any part of this burden any longer, my darling. You are not strong enough to be bothered with anything."

It was useless to contradict him, and I felt very much in the category of the frail fainting females of the seventies, as he took me back to the veranda and put me in my big chair.

"I shall not be long," he said, "and don't bother about anything, remember, until I get back."

There was no one on the veranda but Lillian, and she answered the question in my eyes.

"Katherine took the baby upstairs," she said, "your mother-in-law has gone to her room for her nap. Harry and Dickey have the boys downstairs in the playroom, and I suppose Mary and Marion have not yet exhausted the possibilities of 'says he,' 'he says,' and 'he said.'"

There was in her voice a hint of amusement more than half irritation which I always hear in any reference to Marion's undeniable interest in Ronald Brixton. It is a note which I always ignore, however, when possible, and I laughed lightly as I evaded it.

"I don't know which set of small boys enjoys that basement playroom the more," I said, "our husbands or Junior and Roderick. When Hank and Bill get here the day after tomorrow I'm afraid there won't be room for them all."

Lillian smiled in a sharing of my amusement over the little-boy interest which ever since the Christmas time Dicky and Harry have displayed in the fittings of the basement playroom.

"I used to think Dicky was the only Peter Pan in the diggings," she said, "but Harry certainly is a runner-up for him. All this, however, is beside the mark."

She fixed her brilliant eyes on mine, regarded me steadily for a long second, then asked, quietly:

"Just where did the cyclone strike, anyway, Madge?"

The Beauty Box

Use dental floss once a day, if you would have your teeth free of foreign particles which, often enough the brush will not dislodge. Use the floss gently, so that it does not cause abrasions in the gums. The time for the thorough cleansing of the teeth is at night.

It has been observed, by those who have seeing eyes, that elbows are pretty much overlooked. They need hard scrubbing, especially when sleeveless frocks are worn. They need, also, a daily anointing with some kind of a creamy cosmetic. The flesh there is coarse and heavy. It takes on a greyness if it doesn't have attention. Few elbows are pretty. Maybe it is because they are neglected.

When girls go jigging merrily along country roads in an open car, the shoulders and the back of the neck should be protected with a light scarf of some kind. Prolonged exposure to sun and wind produces freckles, coarseness of the skin, a heavy leathery quality of the epidermis. There should be a generous application of cold cream at night and a powdering before going out next day for the benzine buggy ride.

The complexion of the Frenchwoman would not look natural if it were not artificial. Makeup has been her inheritance since before the time of Marie Antoinette. She puts on war paint because coquetry is her special dish and the capturing of a husband is an important business. Italian women wear almost no make up. They are wonderfully beautiful, with tall, straight, well developed figures of the old Roman matrons.

One needs two files for trimming the eaves of finger nails. Use the steel one first, shaping from sides toward the center, forming a pleasing oval line. Dig under the eaves with an orange wood stick, and a faint film will appear at the edges. Then get out the beveling file of sandpaper and give a second trimming. The beveling file can be used for removing cuticle at the nail sides. It digs it up and off without injury.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Recommending Aspirants For the Lodge

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the correct signature to be used when signing an application by those whose business it is to recommend applicants for membership in a lodge or other organization? This application is to be read by the committee at a meeting where the membership is assembled.

Should the name be prefixed by MR., MRS. or MISS, or private title added? Or is it better to sign the letter as, ANNA SMITH and not MRS. ANNA SMITH? SUBSCRIBER.

A man signs his full name without the title of MR. An unmarried woman would sign her full name and, if it is necessary, put the title of MISS in parentheses.

A married woman might sign her informal name and then write her formal name in parentheses under it:

ANNA BROWN SMITH
(Mrs. John Smith)

In no case would she sign the form Mrs. Anna Smith.

Presenting a Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When invited to a wedding at church and reception at the home of the bride, which is proper, to give the gift or send it to the bride's home?

2. How should the card read? MRS. S.

1. Always send your wedding gift. There is no time or place for the giving of a gift at a reception. There is enough to do at that time, with all the many details that must be attended to, and the present should have been sent before the wedding, so that it could have its note of thanks written before the marriage.

The gift should be sent about two weeks, or a week, before the date. Then the bride-to-be will have time to write the thank-you note.

2. It is not necessary to write anything on the card that accompanies the gift, and nowadays most people just send their visiting-card with no message written on it. The point is, of course, that the gift sent at this time carries its own message, the obvious message of wishing-you-happiness.

However, if you wish to write a message, it is perfectly proper to do so. The wording would, of course, depend on the degree of your relationship or friendship with the bride or groom, or both. Something like this, perhaps: "Dearest wishes for your happiness always," on "Congratulations and every good wish for your happiness," or "Love and highest wishes for your happiness."

YOUNG ARCHERS TO BE TAUGHT BY WARING

Orchestra Leader to Give Daily Lessons With Bow For Sun-Telegraph Club

It just happened that while the organization of the Sun-Telegraph Junior Archers' Club is under way one of the expert archers of America came to Pittsburgh in the person of Fred Waring, conductor of the "Pennsylvanians," featured at Loew's Penn Theater this week.

Waring is so keenly interested in the sport that he has consented to give a daily lesson in archery to the children while he is here this week.

In the meantime, hundreds of Pittsburgh's boys and girls have filed their application for membership in the Sun-Telegraph Junior Archers' Club and as fast as the applications come in the youngsters will be notified by letter how they can get a complete Tom Thumb archer's set free, including a wire string and spring bow, a set of rubber-tipped arrows and an official colored target.

Boys and girls who would like to join this new club are invited to send in the application blank on this page.

Thugs Beat and Rob Man on North Side

Two thugs robbed Robert Davis, of 1410 Sandusky street, of $3.50 and a street car pass while he was walking in Lacock street, near Sandusky street today, police reported. Pedestrians found Davis on the sidewalk unconscious from a severe beating. He was revived at the Allegheny General Hospital and told of the attack.

VILLAGE SAVED FROM FLAMES

CANONSBURG, July 20.—Only the heroic work of neighbors, who formed a bucket brigade, prevented fire in the home of Jules De Baker early today from sweeping Belgian Hill, a community above the mining town of Cecil, 10 miles from here.

DeBaker, his wife, his uncle, Sebastian Kochler, and Major Zgorliski, a friend, were aroused from sleep by smoke.

While they battled the flames, Pete DeBlander, a neighbor, awoke, called the Canonsburg Fire Department and then summoned neighbors.

France to Explain Armament Stand

PARIS, July 20. — (AP.) — The French memorandum on disarmament probably will be published in Paris tomorrow evening.

In the memorandum, already transmitted to the secretary of the League of Nations, France is reported to have explained the measures it has taken since the World War leading toward disarmament and to have presented the thesis of "security, arbitration and disarmament" which it is preparing to defend before a general disarmament conference.

Girl Given Prison Term in Forgeries

In sentencing Ruth Floyd, 18, of 1037 Forbes street, to 30 days in jail before granting her a two-year parole, Judge James H. Gray, today said:

"I think it will do you good to stay in jail and repent."

The girl, an orphan, employed as a domestic, forged the names of her employers to checks for merchandise and also cashed checks, she said, for her "boy-friend."

PHILA.'S OFFER GIVEN G. O. P.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—(AP.)—Philadelphia today offered its new convention hall and 15,000 hotel rooms for the 1932 Republican National convention.

Mayor Harry A. Mackey, heading a delegation of political and business leaders of the city, told Chairman Fess, of the Republican National Committee, that Philadelphia is fully equipped to meet the needs of the convention.

Before the conference began, the Mayor said the city was ready "to meet the bids of any other city, so fas as money is concerned." He said he felt sure banking interests of Philadelphia would subscribe $200,000 or more for the convention. Mackey acted as spokesman for the delegation, which included Senator Davis, of Pennsylvania.

Many social functions were given during the past week, and more will take place this week, in honor of a bride of August. She is Lillian Lafbury, daughter of the George Lafburys, of Baum boulevard, and on August 15 will become the bride of Myron Vincent Wills.

On Saturday Mrs. Kemble Riddele entertained with a bridge-luncheon in honor of the bride-elect, in Webster Hall, with covers laid for 12 guests, and the table centered with pink roses, blue cornflowers and baby's breath. Sharing honors with the guest of honor was her house guest, Betty Jenkins, of Pasadena, Cal.

Guest at Luncheon

Mrs. Lorin Burt, of Windsor street, entertained with a luncheon on Friday for 20 guests, and on Wednesday Rebecca Loeffler, daughter of the Frederick P. Loefflers of Myron avenue, entertained with a bridge luncheon.

On Tuesday Miriam Kennedy of Maryland avenue, Mrs. Riddele and Miss Jenkins will give a bridge luncheon in the Kennedy home in honor of the bride-elect. They were all classmates at the Winchester School, and Betty Jenkins spent her junior year of Smith College at the Sorbonne, Paris, France.

Sitting in a grandstand flooded by the rays of a burning July sun may not sound attractive, but that's just what a lot of folks did Saturday afternoon when the Pinks played the Blues on the Pittsburgh Polo Club field in front of the Pittsburgh Hunt Club.

Polo Attracts

Yesterday in the news section we used some of the pictures taken of spectators at the polo match.

Among the spectators were, of course, the David I. McCahills, who've always been interested in polo, and whose son, David I. McCahill, Jr., was one of the players.

Mrs. McCahill wore a delft blue suit with a dash of white, and a panama hat. In her box were Mrs. J. G. Steitz in powder blue linen and a white panama and Mrs. McCahill's sister, Mrs. Edward O. Tabor.

In a car parked by the ringside were the McCahills' twin daughters, Marie and Marguerite, with a group of friends. The twins wore white dotted swiss frocks and scarlet jackets and hats of white felt with brief upturned brims of black velvet.

* * *

With them was Louise King in a smart ensemble with the dress having a white background printed in cherry red and a cherry red jacket printed in the same design in white.

Red Is Popular

Betty Gregor chose a pink crepe frock and a white beret; Nancy Steitz, a white crepe frock, and Virginia Boyce, a blue meshknit sports dress. Anne Steitz was in white meshknit, and Marie Kaye in a blue crepe printed in black.

Others I noticed were Edna Diebold, Theo Dora Maloney, Mrs. William A. Tracy, Ruth Barclay in white, Dorothy Barclay in yellow crepe and Virginia Barclay in white crepe.

Dorothy Colbert chose a gayly printed gown with a brief blue jacket, and Mrs. H. C. May, Jr., wore a beige dress with brown crepe forming a cowl effect at the back of the frock.

Jane Flaccus, in a blue flannel skirt and white blouse, was with her father and mother, the Charles L. Flaccuses, in their box. Mrs. Flaccus chose a tailored, sleeveless white crepe dress and a wide-brimmed panama.

Mary Louise Ellis was there with P. B. Walker and Virginia Wickersham. And E. J. Harrison was sitting in a box with his daughters, Virginia and Helen Jamison and Mrs. Wayne R. Jamison.

* * *

An important date for one of the largest social functions of the year has been changed. The annual Cinderella Ball is scheduled for the evening of November 25, the night before Thanksgiving, instead of the following Friday, November 27. And the ball will be given in the William Penn Hotel instead of the University Club.

New Date Is Chosen

At a house party during the week-end, James Todd, Jr., of New York and Sewickley, entertained at his farm in Grantsville, Md. Among his guests were the Dudley Livingstons, Harriet Nourse Ramsburgh, of Sewickley; Alma Binns, of Uniontown, and several Sewickley boys, including Putnam Goldsbury, Frank F. Brooks, Jr., W. Marcelin Scaife, Jr., William G. Doolittle, Jr., John Richardson and Charles A. Woods, Jr.

B. P. W. Majority 'Spinsters,' Not 'Old Maids'

An interesting composite picture of a Business and Professional Woman's Club member may be assembled from the 6,924 questionnaires returned to the National Federation. The picture shows that she is largely spinster, and be it understood that a very fine line of distinction is to be drawn here between 'spinster' and 'old maid,' for it is pointed out that no woman spending so much for cosmetics, beauty treatments, care of the hair and for clothes could be termed "old maid." The sum spent amounted to nearly $900,000.

No less than 2,903 of the answers declared for permanents and 1,360 replied that they have marcels. Another proof of the inappropriateness of "old" is the fact that 2,396 of the women who answered indulge regularly in swimming; 1,567 go in for golf, 1,205 play tennis and 696 prefer horse-back riding for their recreation.

Almost half of the women who answered the questionnaires list themselves as housekeepers and possessors of real kitchens and only 896 take their meals outside their homes. The answers showed, too, that many of the women are widows and many others are married and a proportion of these have children.

Have Real Kitchens

The figures show that these women spend $15,934,760.40 for groceries every year and this in addition to the expenditures for vegetables, milk, meat and canned and bottled goods.

COAT-DRESSES APPROPRIATE FOR EARLY AUTUMN WEAR

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, July 20. — Many things are not often what they seem and this applies especially to the coat-dresses that are such a feature of the present collections. Women seem to have taken to the coat-dress with enthusiasm as it gives them a garment that is a mixture of utility, simplicity and dressiness without fuss. The coat-dress in a semi-sheer fabric is particularly good for the woman who has to spend the day out of doors and take in several functions and engagements and who yet desires to be appropriately dressed throughout the day. The more mature woman is particularly keen about this garment, for it has the tailored look combined with the lingerie note that is so pleasing and becoming to her. No doubt we shall see many coat-dresses during the early autumn as they are very appropriate wear for that time of the year. Dark blue or black combined with white or pale ecru appears to be the logical color combination for this item of wear.

* * *

DESPITE THE EMPHASIS on color and other color combinations, the best houses go on turning out exquisite frocks of black and white. One of the nicest seen this season is sketched here. It is by Vionnet and is typical of the collection of this noted designer. It is of black marocain with a draped cowl in front of white georgette. The bodice has wide cape sleeves ending at the elbow. Diagonal seams are arranged over the hips to give a close line to the top of the circular skirt. The belt is of black kid.

* * *

THE COAT-DRESS is by Lelong and has been voted one of the best models in his mid-season collection. It is of dark blue crepe marocain. The top of the dress has wide revers over a jabot of white batiste bordered with lace. Starting at the under arm seam, just back of the revers, the coat idea is more pronounced as the line deepens to just below the hips and passes across the back in a fitted effect with pleated coat-tails. Comfortable width is assured by three inverted pleats in both front and back of the skirt.

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 20.—(AP.)—President Carlos Ibanez has publicly approved the recent announcement of Minister of Interior Juan Esteman Montero guaranteeing personal liberty to all Chileans.

Mexican Generals' Pay Cut 22 Per Cent

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—(AP.)—The War Department today cut 22 per cent from the pay of generals. 'Lower ranking officers lost 10 to 15 per cent. The cuts become effective August 1.

In this way $2,000,000 will be sliced from the department's expenses during the remaining five months of the fiscal year.

Common soldiers, who get 60 cents a day in American money, but have to buy their own food, won't be reduced.

Graceful Flaring Lines
Pattern 2173
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

Here is the type of frock in which no one can help feeling charming, a frock that makes everyone a little more gracefully youthful and slender. The flaring double cap sleeves play a large part in its becoming effect, widening the shoulder line and making the waistline slender by contrast, and the flaring sections at each side of the skirt carry out the same effect. Lace or sheer printed silks or chiffons are ideal for this frock. The knotted ribbon belt is in two colors to match the colors of the print.

Obtainable only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4⅛ yards of 39-inch material. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given. No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred), for each pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

OUSTED DEPUTY NAMED SHERIFF

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 20.—(AP.)—Al Bridwell, former major league baseball player, has been appointed sheriff of Scioto County to succeed Maurice J. Caldwell, who resigned last week when Prosecutor Cameron Meacham began an investigation into his administration.

Bridwell recently was dismissed as chief deputy by Caldwell. Deputy Arthur Oakes, dismissed with Bridwell, has been named chief deputy. Caldwell recently faced four indictments charging embezzlement and acceptance of a bribe to free a prisoner. He was acquitted of the bribery charge, however, and the other charges were nulled.

3 Youths Arrested In Roadhouse Holdup

HAZLETON, Pa., July 20.—(AP.)—Police here arrested three young men, who are charged with having been with a gang of six young men who held up the roadhouse of Mrs. Tessie Johns, on the Freeland-White Haven road, 16 miles from this city, late Saturday night.

The gang held up the attendants and patrons at the point of guns and smashed several slot machines they found in the barroom. All they took was the cash from the slot machines.

VETERAN PHILA. JUDGE DIES

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—(AP.)—Judge James E. Gorman, 71, member of the Municipal Court bench since its establishment, 18 years ago, died yesterday at his home. He sent his resignation to Gov. Pinchot Friday, but no action had been taken on it.

Prior to his elevation to the Municipal Court bench, he served as magistrate from 1898 until 1913.

A Democrat, Judge Gordon had the support of Republicans during his fight for re-election for a 10-year term in 1923. His term would have expired the first Monday in 1932.

He was an exponent of better treatment for juvenile offenders of the law and led many battles in their behalf. He believed that separation of children and parents was largely responsible for children turning to crime. His fight for the mothers' pension fund in Pennsylvania aided materially in getting the legislation passed.

Committees Named By Postal Clerks

HARRISBURG, July 20.—(AP.)—Committees were named at a caucus meeting which opened the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Postoffice Clerks here. United States Senator James J. Davis and Representative Samuel A. Kendall, Meyersdale, will speak at a banquet tonight.

Committee chairmen named today were Heaster Killian, Reading, credentials; H. M. Foreman, Allentown, rules; T. E. McCan, Scranton, officers' reports; C. A. Stauffer, Philadelphia, finance; F. E. Beamer, Lancaster, constitution and by-laws, and J. P. Holleran, Pittsburgh, resolutions.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Things I Never Knew Till Now

(But which pays swell dough!)

That not one person in the whole wide world (and you may bet on this!) can tell how many huckles are in a huckleberry pie!

That Webster's New International Dictionary will have 2,620 pages and 452,000 entries, including for the first time Sinclair Lewis' "Babbitt" and Everybody's "Whoopee."

That when a show fails to prosper on Broadway—it no longer closes—or folds or fails. It is "buttoned."

That no person may enter the House of Commons in London wearing an overcoat or carrying an umbrella.

That Handel remained a bachelor because the parents of his first and only love insisted that he give up composing music.

That Mark Twain considered himself a failure.

That Einstein was only 28 when he developed the idea of relativity and generalized the theory of gravitation.

That an after-dinner speaker is a guy who always has more to say just when you think he has finished.

That Locke, who had no children, wrote a valuable treatise on how to bring them up—and it is among the classics.

That in the early part of the 17th century a lawyer, physician or a divine wasn't taken seriously if he couldn't read music or sing.

That Harry Richman says the stock market is coming back—but not to the same people!

That a motto to remember is that it is always safe to learn, even from our enemies, seldom safe to instruct, even our friends.

That when Emerson was in Harvard, a student was not allowed to go to the theater, under pain of a penalty of $10. (Hurray for Yale!)

That virtually one-half the adults of England, 10 years after the reign of Queen Victoria, could not read or write.

That controversialists should keep cool; in the moment of passion aroused by unfavorable criticism they are liable to make sweeping assertions which are open to attack by specialists—inviting ridicule.

That Ellen Terry, before essaying the role of Ophelia, went to an insane asylum to study the inmates.

That in the Talmud it is stated that when a man teaches his son no trade it is as if he taught him highway robbery.

That Stonewall Jackson, when teaching at a military institute, severely criticized a student for muffing a problem. Later, Jackson realized his own error and walked a mile in the rain to apologize.

That Landor argued no man is so ignorant as not to know that he who has lost all his enemies will soon lose his energy.

That vending machine manufacturers say that over $3,000,000 in lead nickels were found in machines last year.

That Thackeray liked to hear people talk about themselves. (Oh, boy! Why didn't columnists live in those good old days?)

That a German has perfected an umbrella with a radio in it!

That every day is a Sabbath day. Monday for the Greek, Tuesday for the Persian, Wednesday for the Assyrian, Thursday, the Egyptian; Friday, the Turkish; Saturday, the Jewish, and Sunday for the Christian.

That a cold bath is easy to take if half of it is warm water.

That the plane that killed Rockne cost $80,000. And that the wreckage was peddled to a Wichita junk dealer for $100.

That R. C. O., in Judge, says the bigger the lobby, the stiffer the usher. The darker the theater, the narrower the aisles. The more effective the refrigerator, the more certain the pneumonia. The taller the doorman, the more elaborate the uniform, and the larger the signs, the punker the movie!

That when they knock you it's a sure sign you have 'em worried.

That on Broadway a fool is a guy who wises up a sucker—Aladdin, they remind you, never let others borrow his lamps.

That Swift died at 78, in accordance with a vow that he never would wear spectacles, preferring to bump into furniture, etc.

That Rembrandt, while at work, would not give audience to the greatest monarch on earth. (Office sitters, please note.)

That Hawthorne always washed his hands before opening and reading a letter from Sophia Peabody, his future wife.

That Frederick the Great, when he died, left 130 snuff-boxes. (Gosh! It must have been a nuisance having to keep saying "Gezoontight").

That writing columns like these is almost as silly as reading them—but hardly as tiresome.

That a Supreme Court Justice just decided that the term "lousy" is not libelous. (Golly, but you other columnists are lousy.)

Film Feature in Harris Is 'A Holy Terror'

Sally Eilers, who recently had roles in "Let Us Be Gay," "Reducing," "Quick Millions" and "The Black Camel," has the leading feminine role in "A Holy Terror," starring George O'Brien, now on view in the Harris. O'Brien plays the role of a young society polo player who, trailing the suspected slayer of his father, meets a beautiful girl, with whom he falls in love. Others in the cast are James Kirkwood, Humphrey Bogart, Stanley Fields and Robert Warwick.

Kennywood Park Keeps Wild West Rodeo

Three current attractions in Kennywood Park are the Compton-Hughes Wild West Rodeo, the Four Haas Brothers, aerial gymnasts, and the dance orchestra, the Kennywoodians, under the direction of Danny Nirella. The rodeo is not a "show," but a display of cowboys, Indians and cowgirls. Both Col. Cy Compton and Capt. Jack Hughes, joint owners of the rodeo, are champions in roping and riding.

Train Kill Noted German Painter

SCHREIBERHAU, Germany, July 20.—(AP.)—Prof. Hermann Hendrich, 74, a painter well known in art circles of the United States, was killed when struck by a railroad train as he was crossing the tracks.

Prof. Hendrich had exhibited many of his works in America. He painted "Neibelungen Spring" for Richard Wagner's Memorial Hall at Koenigswinter.

Chicago Not Crime Center, Judge Holds

QUEBEC, Quebec, July 20.—(AP.)—Judge Harry M. Fisher, of Chicago, before sailing for Europe Saturday said Chicago, even with its Al Capone, is not the crime center of the world. He declared: "There is nothing the underworld hates more than light. I think the publicity we receive is doing us a tremendous amount of good."

'Television' Method Used By Men Who Select Hollywood Casts

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, July 20.

Hollywood extras are cast by television. The actual machines are not employed, but the mental processes of five men in the Central Casting Bureau amount to the same thing.

In this nerve-center of the film capital, three telephone operators sit at a low switchboard, which receives 30 calls simultaneously. In sight of them, on the other side of the board, five casting directors are lined up at a long table. Each has three phones at his elbow.

Ina Claire

An extra calls in. "Mary Jones," announced the operators. In the brains of these five remarkable memory experts, there forms immediately a mental picture of the extra. They even know approximately what wardrobe she has.

The operator waits 10 seconds. If none of the casting directors has asked to speak to Mary Jones, she says tersely: "Nothing," and pulls the plug.

According to Dave Allen, head of the bureau, his five experts can conjure the image of every regular extra on the list. At the peak hour, between 4:30 and 7 p. m., the calls average 1,000 an hour. But on one occasion, the bureau records, 1,700 calls were handled.

And you and I go on saying:

"I remember the face, but I can't recall the name."

LATEST GOSSIP

Rex, king of wild horses, has gone to Arizona to spend the rest of his days on a ranch. Jack Lindall, his trainer since 1923, now works on George O'Brien's horse. This man was the only person who could get Rex to do his stunts. The horse followed him around like a dog. Did you know Rex originally came from the stables of the Colorado Agricultural College?... Al Jolson will have a life story coming out the first of the year. Mark Hellinger is writing it . . . Ricardo Cortez is the latest to succumb to polo. He has bought two ponies . . . Bess Meredyth leaves today to meet Michael Curtiz in Paris . . . Is it apropos, I ask you, that R.-K.-O. has a story scout named John Twist? . . . Seymour Shulberg, son of B. P., is the newest member of the Paramount publicity department. Next fall he goes East to prep school and then to Dartmouth . . . If the depression is going to continue, Leo Carrillo is wondering if he hadn't better make a Scotch picture.

Ricardo Cortez

THAT'S SETTLED

I understand Ricardo Cortez plays opposite Ina Claire in the picture she will do for Radio. The funny part of it is, nobody knows what the picture will be. Three stories are being submitted to Ina and she may or may not find one of them satisfactory.

Offhand, you wouldn't think that the sleek Ric and the witty, volatile Ina would make a good team. But then who would have thought that ice cream would go with cantaloupe?

Many Pastimes Develop Between Scenes

Screen players have many ways of passing the time on a set between scenes. Off-screen fancies range from reading books, studying dialogue and "prettying" themselves to romping with dogs and climbing to the "cat-walks" near the roof.

The set of Paramount's "Forbidden Adventure" is typical of motion pictures. Edna May Oliver usually reads a book between scenes. Louise Fazenda spends her time telling stories.

Mitzi Green clambers over sets when she doesn't have to study with her school teacher. When she is garbed in boy's costume for a part of the film she romps with the gang of 25 kids who also appear in the picture. When she is clothed in a lovely dress, she "pretties" herself in true feminine fashion.

Between scenes Jackie Searl gets even with the boys who pummell him in front of the camera, wrestling with them and throwing boys much larger than himself.

Often during these waits Bruce Line, who plays the boy king, goes to a corner of the set with his mother and rehearses his dialogue. This is his first screen appearance.

Norman Taurog, who is directing, permits the children to express themselves in their play, feeling they will work much harder when he is ready for them.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Crosby Gaige has entered into a contract with Mary Philips, featured player of his production, "The House Beautiful," whereby she agrees to remain under his sole management for a period of five years. Miss Philips will continue in "The House Beautiful" throughout the coming season which includes an engagement in this city. The tour begins in September.

Small Timer, glaring at the trombone for a derisive blast, says the old adage has been amended and that now a man is as old as he looks while a woman is as young as she peels.

* * *

Torchy, the brighest office boy in fiction, who held the magazine page for a long time, is to come to life again in the movies. Ray Cook has been selected to play the name role and Jean Peers will impersonate Torchy's heart-beat exciter. Dorothy Mackaill had this role in the silents.

* * *

Small Timer says that women who used to fume about tobacco fumes making lace curtains odoriferous now fume about their daughters snitching all their cigarets.

* * *

Heywood Broun, well-known columnist and reformed drama critic, who once acted in a revue, "Round the Town," is one of the sponsors of a co-operative revue, "Shoot the Works," which opens in New York tomorrow night. He also will act in it. It will give work to approximately 100 persons, actors, musicians and stagehands. Only members of the chorus are guaranteed salaries. Others will share in the profits.

* * *

Donn Wermuth, of the Warner publicity office, says he knew Small Timer as a boy, and that they nicknamed him Woolly because he shrank from washing.

* * *

Ralph Morgan, who was leading man with the Sharp Players here for a long time, has been signed for screen work in Hollywood, where he'll soon be shaking hands with his old pal, Harry Bannister, now a leading citizen there.

Warner Theaters to Get New Sound Horns

The Stanley has installed new sound horns which carry every word spoken from the stage and screen to the most remote section of the theater. The same system is being installed in the Enright. Virtually every Warner theater in Pittsburgh is to be similarly equipped.

THE LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, July 20.—Radio programs continue to be exchanged between Europe and the United States. We receive 10, however, to every one we send. I wonder why.

We have any number of offerings which should please the foreign ear—the big symphony orchestras, the warblings of the operatic stars, the recitals of the concert fiddlers, Sousa's Band, an army of jazzbos, talks that range from ambition to prosperity, entertainers that roam from accordionists to yodlers, sketches that vary all the way from Main street to big city underworlds. Yet there seems to be little interest in Europe for them.

Can it be the radio rulers do not try hard enough to push their wares, or, pushing hard enough, find that their wares are too closely identified with the breath of commerce, or that European listeners are more alert to the diversions right at their own doorsteps?

* * *

Outside of a few public officials and a few second-rate artists the radio men send nothing across the seas. At least nothing that they take the trouble to announce. Even our jazz is not transmitted save in isolated cases, and our jazz is still easily the best in the world. Our symphony bands are recognized as superior to those abroad. Yet they, too, are unrepresented in European parlors.

* * *

It seems to us that American radio is deserving of a better break. We appear ready to impress foreigners on their own soil with the merits of the republic in every phase except that of radio. Yet, regularly we are given foreign programs. They pour in every day from every part of Europe—persons in high office, musicians playing native airs, maestros, offering third-rate dance music. We hear them—and in most cases get a kick out of them merely because they issue from great distances.

Today, Europe hasn't much left to send us. Shaw has wisecracked for us. MacDonald and Lloyd George have expounded their political theories. Heads of continental countries have talked to us on everything from economics to war. Lady Astor has aired her opinions. Royalty has gabbed. And so have leading men of letters, leading scientists, leading medicos, leading preachers.

England may not have sent us her best bands—those military outfits that play for the royal ceremonies—but France has given us her Garde Republicaine Band, supposed to be the best in Europe. And native singers and musicians have sent us their folk melodies from Germany and Hungary and Italy.

WE NOW PRESENT

By Darrell V. Martin
Radio Editor

COLUMBIA HAS hit upon a scheme to cut down the high cost of telephone lines . . . experiments begin soon on a series of short wave stations designed to relay programs over the country from New York . . . and, needless to say, the telephone boys are in high tension wondering how it will turn out . . . We know of no tenor on the radio regularly who projects more genuine feeling into the waves than James Melton of The Revelers . . . hear him sing "Machushla" on WCAE at 9:30 tonight . . . John McCormack's concert on KDKA at 10:30 is full of four leaf clovers, among them "Killarney" and "When You and I Were Young, Maggie" . . . Guy Lombardo, always finding things, pops up on WJAS at 10 with a new voice discovery . . . but if it's colorful music you're looking for (and how!) catch Cab Calloway on KDKA at 11:20 . . . have you ever heard Cab play "Black and Tan?" . . . well!

ASSESSOR AIDES SUMMONED FOR QUIZ

Connors Admits Error in Charging Only 95 Had Registered at Apartment

Investigation of assessment of phantom voters from vacant lots and empty buildings continued today by investigators under supervision of the City Board of Registration commissioners in an effort to block fraud at the fall primaries.

Subordinate assessors were to be called in for explanation as to why a boiler factory in the Strip, and other buildings, some occupied by only a few persons, had been listed as housing many voters.

Peter J. Connors, chief of the investigators, today said his men had erred in charging that only 95 persons out of 212 has been assessed at Cathedral Mansions, Ellsworth avenue.

Connors said he had checked the list with Henry Zeugschmidt, the district assessor, and found that 229 names were on the assessment list from the Cathedral Mansions this year, and that 242 were assessed for next year's voting.

Braddock Pair Face Hearing On Home Blaze

Three persons, including a man and his wife, will be arraigned tomorrow morning before Alderman Thomas A. Flanigan in connection with a fire in the home of the couple at 400 Talbot avenue, Braddock, early Saturday.

Those facing arraignment, according to Fire Marshal Thomas L. Pfarr, are Simon Lefkowitz, his wife, Katie, and Andy Peplessky, a boarder.

Pfarr said the arrests came through a tip he received on Friday. His informant furnished a wrong address, but a few minutes before the fire broke out, he called again and gave the correct address, according to Pfarr.

Braddock police and firemen were notified, and when they arrived the flames were coming from the second floor, Pfarr said. Rags soaked with gasoline and 35 gallons of gasoline were found in the house, but were not reached by the flames, Pfarr reported.

The house was vacant at the time. The arrests were made when the three made their appearance at daybreak.

DEBRIS SNARLS TRAFFIC AFTER DOWNPOUR

Homes Hit by Lightning; Phone Service Disrupted When Bolt Strikes Cable

More thunderstorms were expected today following a storm which swept the Pittsburgh district last night, leaving in its wake debris-covered streets, damaged homes and fallen trees.

The downpour drenched and dispersed throngs awaiting the first showing of the city's free Sunday night movies in four parks. Operators put on the shows with a meager attendance, following the storm.

BOLTS STRIKE HOMES

All lines of the Linden telephone exchange and the teletype system at Woods Run Station were disabled when lightning struck a cable in Preble avenue. The homes of Joseph Leshe, 2020 Perrysville avenue, and Michael Kumsack, of 3510 Massachusetts avenue, were also struck.

Struck by a bolt, a tree fell against the home of City Fireman George Baines, 1617 Meyler street, damaging the light wires, and causing a blaze in the dwelling.

Traffic at Galveston avenue and Monterey street was rerouted while workmen removed trees that had fallen in the thoroughfares.

Traffic in West Carson street was crippled by mud and rock that had been washed down from the hillside.

A street car split a switch at Woods Run avenue and Brighton road, blocking traffic there for two hours.

THREE DIE OF HEAT

Thermometers that hovered above 90 degrees before the storm, fell to nearly 70 degrees after the rain had ceased.

Miss Margaret E. Fleming, 79, of 3560 Beechwood boulevard, died in her home yesterday from a heart attack caused by the heat, according to a coroner's report.

Another victim was Richard Hardy, 77, of 207 South avenue, Wilkinsburg, who died last night in his home. Death was caused by heat, according to a morgue report.

The third heat casualty was Edward Duvall, 54, of Brickyard alley, Boston, Pa., who was found dead in bed at his home by a brother. Heart trouble, superinduced by the heat, was assigned as the cause of death, according to a morgue report.

ONE TWIN BORN IN AUTO DIES

One of the twins born to Pauline Potoker, 16, in an auto en route from her home to the Charleroi-Monessen Hospital last night, died there today.

The girl and her father, Tony, started from their home in Wickhaven for the hospital in Charleroi. A little over half way there, she gave birth to the twins. In Charleroi the father stopped to pick up Dr. Alden O. Davis and then continued to the hospital.

3RD CANDIDATE IN 5TH WARD

The third candidate for alderman in the Fifth Ward, scene of many Kline-Malone political battles, entered the field today. He is David Rapoport, and seeks the office held by Martin Griffin.

Previously, former Alderman Albert Logan, Negro, announced he would contest for the job, and Griffin, Malone man, is considered a candidate to succeed himself.

Rapoport is district chairman of the Twelfth district of the ward, formerly the twentieth district. His statement asserted that he was entering the battle because he felt the people of the ward desired a change.

MOTOR BUREAU RECEIPTS DROP

The Pittsburgh Motor Club reported today that revenue of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles at Harrisburg fell off $704,713 during the first six months of 1931, due to the decreased registration of passenger cars and trucks.

According to figures announced by the automobile manufacturers, production was 25 per cent below the same period of 1930. Passenger car registration in Pennsylvania fell off 5,381 while the truck registration decreased proportionately. Total receipts of the bureau for the period were $14,860,810 for passenger cars and $7,163,557 for trucks.

Man Slays Woman In Church Crowd

DETROIT, July 20.—(AP.)—John Nikita, 27, faced a charge of murder today for shooting Mrs. Anna Oniga, 33, four times in the back yesterday before the horrified eyes of 500 other churchgoers, leaving St. John's Greek Catholic Church. Assistant Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea said Nikita told him he shot Mrs. Oniga because she had prevented him from seeing his estranged wife, a niece of the slain woman.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:
SANTA MONICA, Cal., July 20.

Our two finest race horses seem to have taken up the same racket as our prize fighters and wrestlers: "You win this time and I'll win the next. Let's take it easy and look at the dough we can get."

If Mr. Hoover wants to call a cabinet meeting nowadays, he will have to hold it in Europe. He is the only member in the U. S.

If we had just donated to 'em the price of our long distance telephone and cable calls, they wouldn't have needed any more help. Clarence Mackay made enough on it already to afford to marry a prima donna.

Yours, WILL.

Some Puzzles Being Drawn for 1960 Schoolboys

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Last week's history will amaze the school children of 1960.

Germany started it when its banks hung out a sign, "No matinee today."

Before the week was over the banks had opened up again.

In Bulgrabbia there is so little dough in the national bank that the night watchman is sleeping at home.

It affects the entire financial structure of Europe because a banker ain't a farmer who can pray for rain.

Yet, everything seems all right today, nobody is worried and we think that is the right idea. You get used to everything in time and salt won't save you.

And the diplomats have finally realized that a peace treaty won't get you nearly so much as a complaint blank.

The world has finally realized that it is like the town of Pung Bow in China. Its population consists of 11,000 laundrymen who make a living by taking in one another's washing.

Which seems the answer to world trade. We will send Europe our sox if they send us their collars.

Rolling Rock Preparing For Fall Hunting; Birds Set Loose

LIGONIER, Pa., July 20.—It's too hot for the hounds to bay these days, and only an occasional horse and rider are seen silhouetted on Laurel Ridge, where the Rolling Rock Hunt Club has its 18,000 acres of mountain and valley.

But preparations for the fall hunts on the preserve, owned by the Mellon family, are going on every day. Don Terrell, Scot gamekeeper, whose father and grandfather before him tended the game on Highland preserves, is raising 5,000 mallard ducks, 3,000 pheasants, hundreds of quail, for the cool dark days of autumn. Then the sky will be black with ducks and the woods full of pheasants and other game birds—and many of the 400 members of the hunt club will take to the old fashioned sport of hunting—hunting in the grand manner.

Birds of all ages fill the low grounds below the Rolling Rock club house. Ducks are breaking out of their shells, kicking their way into the world. They are being hatched in incubators. Thousands more are paddling along the brooks. Pheasants in fields—brooder raised, and quail mothered by bantam and other types of hens cover the lowlands.

But aside from regular game birds, Terrell has conducted several unusual experiments—with wild turkey and ruffed grouse. Raisers of turkey in Pennsylvania have almost despaired, he explained, due to the heavy fatalities from blackhead—commonest turkey disease which exacts high toll when they are raised on the ground. Terrell saw quail in Virginia raised on wire screening—so the birds couldn't touch the ground and get the blackhead. He tried it with turkeys—and he he has 200 of them, almost full grown, and without loss. The screening is about 24 inches from the ground, and the turks have never touched the earth.

A world-record for raising gruffed grouse in captivity is also his—four grouse screened in, have withstood captivity for three years. The previous record was in the east, when they were kept for a year.

John M. Lazear, chairman of the game committee of the club, also has for pets two barred owls, who had been preying on the mallards; and a hawk, who has in his day fed on the Rolling Rock stock, against the law.

The three outlaws are behind the bars now—and Mr. Lazear wouldn't object to parting with them, because they eat too much.

Beebe Rebuked Policemen, Not Clark, Records Show

Stenographic reports of last Wednesday's police trial board hearings, transcribed today, revealed the Sun-Telegraph erroneously reported Safety Director James M. Clark as being chided by two of his subordinates.

The verbatim testimony of trial of James Dignan and Alphone Pacella, patrolmen, charged with beating Albert Tunfar, 30, of 1153 Basin street, shows the remarks reported as being addressed to Clark really were addressed to Pacella.

Pacella was testifying in his own defense on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer, of which he and Dignan were subsequently recommended for dismissal, when a flareup resulted at the hearing.

The published report asserted Police Inspector Albert Beebe as saying Director Clark's questioning of Pacella on his knowledge of near-beer was irrelevant and as adding, still to the director:

"I am tired of this kidding."

Police Inspector Charles Faulkner also was quoted as interposing:

"So am I."

But the stenographic report shows the following questions and answers:

Inspector Beebe: "Director, may I ask a question?"

Director Clark: "Certainly."

Inspector Beebe (turning to witness): "Why don't you quit kidding us and tell the truth?"

Inspector Faulkner: "That's what I say. They are lying. Two drunken bums."

The report shows Director Clark then resumed the examination.

East End Loses Landmark As Church Is Razed

Workmen are busy leveling one of East Liberty's oldest landmarks, the East Liberty Presbyterian Church, at Penn and Highland avenues, which will give way to a $3,000,000 edifice, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Mellon.

While the work is going on, services will be held in the Regent Theater.

Although excavation work will be started immediately after the old building is razed, at least two years will be necessary for the construction of the new edifice, contractors say.

TROLLEY KILLS GIRL ON MERCY ERRAND

Sent for Medicine for Baby Sister, Child Meets Death At Penn and Frankstown

Betty Cordial, 9, of 6383 Aurelia street, was dead today, a victim of a street car accident at Penn and Frankstown avenues last night.

Betty, sent to the drug store for medicine for her baby sister, was hurrying across the street when an out-bound Lincoln avenue car, operated, police said, by William E. Smith, of 3321 Ridgeway street, struck her.

Smith said he applied the brakes as the child started across the street, but was unable to avoid hitting her. She was taken to Pittsburgh Hospital where she remained unidentified for more than an hour after being pronounced dead.

Her mother, Mrs. Bernadine Cordial, and her grandmother, Mrs. Josephine Naylor, identified the body at the hospital.

Mrs. Naylor, after regaining composure, told of a similar accident in her family about a score of years ago. Her little son was killed by a trolley in Johnstown while on an errand.

DEATHS PLACE HOUSE IN DOUBT

WASHINGTON, July 20.—(AP.)—Congressional seats emptied by death have opened anew in six states the political tug-of-war begun last November for mastery of the House.

Administration forces returned from the last election with a majority of two, but since have seen that margin cut and restored as members of both parties passed on. Today House rolls show 214 Republicans, 213 Democrats, 1 Farmer-Laborite and 7 vacancies.

Ohio, with two; Wisconsin, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Georgia and New York, with one vacancy each, supply the fields of contest on which control of the House may hinge. Control now is doubtful, with groups in both parties forecasting victory, while others disclaim any desire to organize for a session which history may record as one of the most turbulent.

Kelly testified that when he slowed down his truck to turn from Penn avenue into Whitfield street, Rissa, who had been driving immediately in the rear, leaped on the truck running board and began beating him, presumably because of a narrowly averted collision. Kelly, discharged by Magistrate Charles Papale, said he would prefer a charge of assault and battery against Rissa.

CHAIN STORES FIGHT TAXES

WASHINGTON, July 20.—(INS.)—The big chain store systems of the nation are planning to fight virtually all state and local tax laws they regard as discriminatory all the way to the Supreme Court, declining to accept the Indiana chain store decision as a general precedent for anti-chain store taxation.

This was evidenced today with appeal by the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company of a case involving a Virginia tax directed at the distributing section of the chain stores.

Under the Virginia law, demand was made on the company for a tax of $5,966 for one year on goods transferred from a central distributing house to the various chain grocery stores throughout the state.

CHILD AND MAN KILLED, 8 HURT BY AUTOS

Father of Six Children Dies After His Machine Plunges Down Hillside

Two persons were killed and seven injured in automobile accidents in the Pittsburgh district over the week-end.

John Doyle, 36, of 212 Hazel way, West Homestead, died last night in Homestead Hospital two hours after his car had plunged down the side of a hill along the Duquesne boulevard, near Kennywood Park. Doyle, father of six daughters, the oldest 11 years and the youngest 8 months, lost control of the machine.

Members of the St. Michael's baseball team, of Munhall, passing on their way to Duquesne, pulled Doyle from the wreckage, hailed a passing car and sent him to the hospital. He was a World War veteran.

Struck by an automobile at Soles and Versailles avenues, McKeesport, yesterday, George Massie, 7, of 1309 Scott street, McKeesport, suffering injuries which caused his death several hours later in McKeesport Hospital, the coroner's office reported.

Four persons were injured yesterday when an automobile driven by Antonio Sposi, 17, of 8126 Frankstown avenue, collided with a car driven by H. Fred Russell, 25, of 1529 Pennock road, at Thomas boulevard and North Dallas avenue.

GIRL HIT-RUN VICTIM

The injured were Russell, his wife, Dorothy, their daughter, Jean, 8 months, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Loretta Alexander, 57, who suffered a probable skull fracture. She is in Pittsburgh Hospital.

Gladys Norton, 33, of 5935 Alder street, was injured yesterday when an automobile in which she was riding crashed against a pole at North Highland and Stanton avenues. Walter Beckley, 30, of 7400 Race street, alleged driver of the car, told police he swerved his machine to avoid hitting another car.

A victim of a hit-and-run driver, Josephine Fespak, 19, of 4933 Monongahela avenue, is in Montefiore Hospital with head and body injuries and a possible fracture of the skull. She was alighting from a street car near her home Saturday night when the automobile, which police say, was stolen, struck her and sped away. The car was recovered later.

WOMAN RUN DOWN

Mrs. Sarah Roskow, 50, of 1728 Broadway avenue, was seriously injured yesterday when she was struck by a truck at Fifth avenue and Smithfield street. She was taken to Mercy Hospital. Police arrested George Peters, 52, of 511 Lockhart street, driver of the truck.

Alex Slovick, 634 Maplewood avenue, Ambridge, is in the Sewickley Valley Hospital, suffering a probable fractured skull and other injuries, as a result of being struck by an automobile driven, police said, by Emilo F. Pitaccio, 621 Beaver road, Ambridge, in Leetsdale yesterday. According to Chief of Police A. W. Noland, of Leetsdale, Slovick alighted from a bus and dashed across the road when he was struck. The driver of the machine was released on his own recognizance.

According to workers for the Miners' Relief, Morvich told them they could hold their tag day without a permit, in defiance to a police edict.

Dangerous Fallston Hill, Where Trucks Run Away

HOW 25 TRUCKS HAVE RUN AWAY ON STEEP FALLSTON HILL, HIT EITHER OF THESE HOUSES OR WRECKED IN STREET

This is the bottom of dangerous Fallston hill at Fallston, Pa., the borough that threatens to blockade the road unless the state does something to relieve residents of the danger of runaway trucks. Since 1924, 25 trucks have been wrecked, six of them in one 12-month period. Notice the patched homes of Silas Ratliff and A. P. Black (wrecked three times), the homes most frequently the victims of the heavy runaways. It's a main road from Ohio, often brings inexperienced "hill country" drivers.

STATE WARNED ON ROAD PERIL

Because heavy trucks have got beyond control on Fallston hill and have crashed twice into the home of its chief of police and street commissioner, Fallston Council has notified the State Highway Department that unless something is done to remedy the trouble, they will close the road. Chief of Police A. Plummer Black and his family have had to move from the house to avoid the danger, they said.

The Borough Council has instructed its attorney, Richard S. Holt, to await the reply of the State Department and then to close the road if no relief is forthcoming from the state.

Despite the efforts of Chief Black to keep from being struck by trucks, he was injured seriously when a truck which he was driving crashed with another truck on the town's main street. The chief was in the hospital for a short time with his injuries.

MEXICAN CRISIS CALLS CALLES

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—(AP.)—Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, Mexico's "strong man," who has twice been called from retirement to help handle emergencies, will be asked by the government to cope with the financial crisis, according to reports published today.

He is said to be slated for the post of "financial czar," with the duty of checking the fall of the silver peso. The newspapers declare he has been offered the presidency of the Bank of Mexico. Recently he has been sitting in on cabinet sessions.

Calles retired three years ago, saying he would come to the aid of the country only in times of stress. The first stress came in 1929, when he took charge of the federal campaign against the Escobar revolt, and last October he intervened in a political controversy which had assumed threatening proportions.

TWO NORTH SIDE MEN SHOT

"Shorty" Preisler, 35, a houseboat resident, arrested yesterday after he wounded two men with a revolver in East Robinson street, will be arraigned in North Side Police Court today.

A bullet struck Earl Baker, 27, of 515 Lacock street, in the left foot and hand. Later, police learned, another bullet had struck Charles Petrosky, 37, of 22 East Robinson street.

According to police, the shooting occurred when Preisler became angry at Baker's attempt to enlist his membership in the Communist party. He whipped out the gun and fired several shots, police reported.

ALL DRESSED UP AND No Place to Owe!

We firmly believe that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. We've been looking at the world across a grocery counter too long not to be sure of that. But we haven't been fooled by what's going on outside our store windows . . . We've noticed that most men, on their way home to dinner, have a quick eye for a smart dress or a saucy bonnet.

In short, husbands like to eat fine food and see fine feathers. Which doesn't seem unreasonable to us—except, you know the fuss they make if you run up a bill for them.

Of course, you also know our advice in such matters: If you buy your food for cash at an A & P store, you're sure of the finest food money can buy—and at prices so low you won't have to skimp on your dinners or your dresses to pay for it. You can actually keep all dressed up on what you save in A & P stores—without running into debt for it either.

BRITONS SPILL DOPE IN TENNIS WIN

WHILE TENNIS, LIKE every other sport, has had its occasional upsets, there has been no thing in many years to compare with the surprise which the net world as a whole, and the American portion of it in particular, experienced when the English team came a seemingly hopeless distance from behind to conquer Sydney Wood and Frank Shields in the last two singles matches of the inter-zone finals and eliminate this country from the Davis Cup competition within a step of the challenge round.

Frank Shields

Even at the start of the matches, the English had been conceded only a fighting chance, in view of the way the Americans had defeated them at Wimbledon, and that chance appeared to have faded when a 50-50 break in the first pair of singles contests was followed by a victory for Uncle Sam in the doubles. That made it necessary for the United States players to win only one of the remaining two singles encounters, and that they would do at least that well few tennis followers had harbored any serious doubt. It was a complete overturning of the dope when the Britons came thorugh and grabbed both of the final events.

AT WIMBLEDON, SHIELDS had defeated Austin and Wood had beaten Perry. Wood in particular had won decisively and seemed certain to repeat. But not only were these results reversed yesterday, but in the two matches the United States won only a single set. It is not uncommon for one player to turn the tables on a man who has defeated him a couple of weeks earlier, but when two do it in one day it must be classed with the most unusual happenings in tennis history.

This will be the first time in 12 years that the United States has not participated in the Davis Cup challenge round either as defender or challenger. America won the cup from Australasia in 1920, defended it annually from 1921 to 1926, losing to France in the latter year, and reached the challenge round each year from 1927 to 1930, inclusive.

THE BIG TURF upset that saw Mate win the Arlington Classic, in which Twenty Grand had been considered a cinch, shows the 3-year-old championship to be undetermined after all. It will take the later meetings of the rivals this season to settle the title. The count is now two out of three for Mate.

Suggestions that Twenty Grand's unexpected defeat may have been due to his not having recovered fully from his recent injury are unfair and deprive Mate of the credit due for a great race. It must be remembered that Mate broke both the track and the Classic records, which should be enough to show that he won on his own class and not through any loss of form on the part of Twenty Grand.

SEE WHERE THOSE Robins are today? In second place and still stepping along faster than any other contender. The Cards were fortunate in winning a Sunday doubleheader from the Giants on a total of only four runs after being shut out Saturday. Otherwise their lead might have been cut to proportions none too comfortable. Even as it is, they'll have to perk up to keep ahead of Brooklyn. One month ago today the Robins were in the second division and below the .500 mark, 12 full games behind the leaders. In the meantime they have won 23 out of 31 games, a .742 clip, while the Cards have done little better than break even, winning 20 out of 38, a gain of six and a half games for Brooklyn.

Ben Chapman

THOUGH BEN CHAPMAN'S base-stealing revival this season will not endanger the old records of Harry Stovey, Billy Hamilton, Ty Cobb or Bob Bescher, there is a strong probability that the Yankee star will at least prove the most successful bag thief the majors have known in 11 seasons.

Chapman has a good chance to pile up a larger total of steals than any other baserunner has amassed in one season since Sam Rice purloined 62 for the Senators in 1920. No other player has reached the 60 mark in the meantime, but Chapman probably will not be far from that number at the finish. He had 36 today.

THE BEST MARK made in either league since Rice's big year was 51. That was reached by two players in the same season, 1922, when Max Carey, of the Pirates, and George Sisler, of the Browns, tied for the major league leadership.

Carey stole 51 in 1923, but no other player has reached 50 in the same period. The closest approaches were made by Frankie Frisch in 1921, Eddie Collins in 1923 and Carey in 1924, each with 49. The highest total in the last six years was Frisch's 48 in 1927.

WILLIAM MULDOON, octogenarian member of the New York Boxing Commission, doesn't blame Max Schmeling for the latter's break with the glove powers of the Empire State. He blames Manager Joe Jacobs. "I like Schmeling, both as a man and as a fighter," Muldoon says. "He is a fighter at heart. He has the right temperament. He realizes that a boxer must expect to get hurt, and he takes his punishment like a man. He is no mama's boy. I blame Jacobs for misrepresenting Schmeling. I believe that when Schmeling promised us he would box Sharkey again he meant to do it, but that little Jacobs, who is out for the money, persuaded him not to do it. Little Jacobs is a smart manager, but I do not agree with his ideas of sportsmanship."

EVIDENCE OF THE gripping appeal of golf is contained in the case of a man who gave so much of his life to tennis that he became the greatest player of his time, but who now confesses that he prefers golf to the game that was considered part of his nature.

The man is none other than Maurice McLoughlin, the "Comet," who ruled the courts in 1912-13-14. "I like golf the better," he declares. "I still play tennis occasionally, but I don't go around the courts looking for a game like I do at the golf courses."

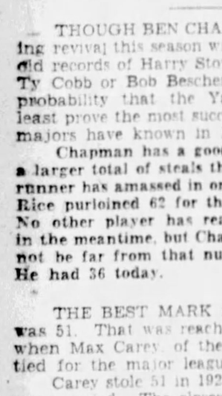
WHEN THE FOOTBALL schedule committee at Pitt booked the University of Iowa for the second game of the coming season, to be played in Iowa City, it was not doing Jock Sutherland a favor. Iowa would not have been called a formidable opponent early last year, but things are different for 1931.



Gordon Locke

Toward the close of last season Burt Ingwersen's men hit their real stride and put on a winning streak which included victories over Detroit, Penn State and Nebraska. Penn State was defeated 19-0 and Nebraska 12 to 7. Pitt was extended to win over Penn State, 19 to 12, while Nebraska held the Panthers to a scoreless tie.

FROM LAST YEAR'S team, Ingwersen will have 12 letter men returning, seven of them regulars. In addition there will be seven men who won the minor "I" and a score of others classed as outstanding sophomores. Though Ingwersen will have only one game in which to scout the Panthers he will not lack dope on them. He was here in person for the Penn State game last fall and saw Eddie Baker use practically every play in the Pitt bag of tricks to win. And then there will be Gordon Locke, former Western Reserve coach, who is back assisting Ingwersen. Locke had the Pitt system pretty well scouted for the Cleveland school in 1930 and has hardly forgotten anything that he learned.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Grateful for their rest day that eased the heat-wave troubles, the Pirates and Braves were ready to resume hostilities this afternoon. The clans of Ens and McKechnie are slated to mix in single battles today and tomorrow.

The Freebooters this morning looked out upon another lively week. Eight battles are scheduled for the six playing days, two bargain bills with the ambitious Robins to enliven the week's activities.

Uncle Robbie and his three-ring circus are due in the city Wednesday morning. They won't be in town long before they are engaged in a two-way scrap with the Pirates, the first dual attraction being carded for Wednesday. The other is set for Saturday.

SOUTHPAWS TO WORK

The third clash of the series with the Tribe is likely to bring a duel of lefthanders. Larry French is ready to go to Fogarty Knoll for the home team, while Skipper Bill has two southpaws in fettle in Tom Zachary and Eddie Brandt. Neither the veteran or the younger Brave has twirled since his hectic fight in Cincinnati, and the two are likely to be seen in action in the remaining games here. It is Zachary's turn to go to the slab.

Manager Ens is a bit dubious as regards Howdy Groskloss so the Sheraden boy may be given another day of rest. Both of Howdy's legs are in bad shape, yet his presence in the lineup is needed, especially against left-hand pitchers.

O, RARE BEN CANTWELL!

Eight thousand Pirate fans were disappointed Saturday when the home guards failed to cop a doubleheader. The Buccos grabbed the laurel wreath in the opener, 9 to 3, but their offensive went into retirement in the nightcap and the Tribe landed one of those 1-to-0 successes.

It is only fair to give a full

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: MAN HAS LEARNED MORE ABOUT FLYING THAN BIRDS—Although man's aeronautical experience has been limited to the last few decades, he has learned more about that mode of travel than all the members of the feathered kingdom have learned since they were given feathers. Man has flown as fast as 368 miles an hour, higher than 43,000 feet, dived at the rate of 350 miles an hour, abruptly swooping upward, flown almost 554 hours without landing, made non-stop ocean flights of more than 3,000 miles, flown upside down, looped the loop, flown in barrel rolls and tailspins—and now a 16,000-mile, 'round-the-world flight in less than five days' flying time. None of these feats are possible for any bird, so it is obvious that man's progress has been much greater over a shorter span.

TOMORROW—THE MAN WHO WORE A BEARD FOR A SHIRT.

NAME TOURNEY OFFICIALS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Six experienced racqueters and tournament officials will direct individual park play in the half-dozen local municipal lots on which the second annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pittsburgh Public Parks tennis championships will swing into action a week from today. Need of exceptional skill and organizing ability will be particularly required lest there ensue a disastrous jam-up before the Inter-Park elimination series can be reeled off on the Frick rectangles Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 6, 7 and 8.

Handling the reins at Schenley Park will be Austin Famariss, crack College avenue southpaw and second vice president of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association. Jake Olko, former Duke varsity star and present South Hills mainstay, will succeed Famariss at Riverview.

COMMITTEE NAMED

Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. flash, steps into the vacancy created by Olko's leaving Highland. Andy Smeaton, Edgewood satellite and late Duke net leader, returns to the important Frick post. Billy Creighton, one time St. Mary's of the Mount High School contender, again assumes the saddle at Olympia, and Ralph Beilstein, blonde Allegheny slasher, holds forth at West.

The foregoing active group will work in conjunction with the following representatives of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association, district net governing body, as special committee in charge of the parks contesting:

ENTRIES CLOSE WEDNESDAY

Entries will be received until midnight Wednesday. The number of aspirants to the more than a score of prizes and particularly to the two trips to the national public parks championships at Detroit the week of August 17 that the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will award various successful competitors in the public courts tilting is rapidly approaching the century mark, a goal that it is likely to come near to being doubled ere the deadline is reached two evenings hence.

Entrants are reminded that unless they procure Pittsburgh parks tennis permits from the City Bureau of Parks they will not be permitted to cavort upon the public rectangles and will thus be automatically defaulted.

Entries for the annual Pittsburgh Center junior and boys' tennis championships will close at 5 p. m. tomorrow. Play will get under way on the Pittsburgh Athletic Association lot early Wednesday morning and will be continued through Thursday, with the possibility that the junior finals will not be staged until Friday.

JIM BELMONT, M'TIERNAN ON EDGE

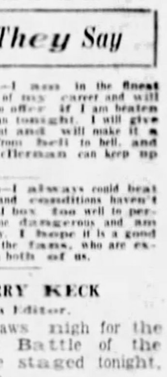
What They Say

Jimmy Belmont—I am in the finest physical condition of my career and will have no excuses to offer if I am beaten by Buck McTiernan tonight. I will give my best throughout and will make it a "fighting" fight from bell to bell, and I do not think McTiernan can keep up the pace.

Buck McTiernan—I always could beat Jimmy Belmont, and conditions haven't changed. I think I box too well to permit him to become dangerous and am confident of victory. I hope it is a good fight and satisfies the fans, who are expecting much from both of us.

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

The hour draws nigh for the Meyers Bowl's Battle of the Century, to be staged tonight, with Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, and Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, the principals.



Buck McTiernan

With the whole community stirred by the long-awaited encounter, indications are that the North Braddock arena will feel its walls bulging when the two gladiators square off against each other at approximately 10 o'clock.

Jimmy Belmont

McTiernan and Belmont were due to return shortly after noon from their retreats in the country to be weighed and examined by the commission physician. They were taken out of town over the weekend to escape the excitement engendered among the partisan fans by their impending clash.

These two young men, who have not met since their days as amateurs, several years ago, but have built up a great enmity between themselves, literally have the town by the ears. Their's is the best ballyhooed rivalry that has come down the pike in many a day in these parts. It extends even to their managers, Frank Klaus, former middleweight champion of the world, who handles Belmont, and Bunny Buntach, former manager of Jimmy and now of McTiernan. The pilots have been at each other's throats ever since the match was made.

BOTH BOXERS PRIMED

Meanwhile, Apples Meyers, the promoter, sits back and is pleased over the fact that he has been badly fooled on this match. When McTiernan recently lost to Ted Yarosz at Hickey Park, Millvale, Meyers wanted to cancel his "natural" with Belmont on the ground that the defeat had ruined the bout as an attraction. Instead, it has turned it into a golden windfall for him and the first capacity crowd of a lean season at the Bowl is in prospect.

That both boxers are primed for the test goes without saying. Belmont has been training for weeks and had to lay off a few days recently to keep from going stale. Meanwhile McTiernan, following the Yarosz bout, got himself a new trainer and chief second in the person of the sagacious Johnny Ray, former local lightweight celebrity, and Johnny has proved a severe taskmaster. He has McTiernan in the best shape he has known in recent bouts and will be the judge of pace in his corner tonight. It was Ray who recently acted in a similar capacity for Jackie Rodgers and steered the

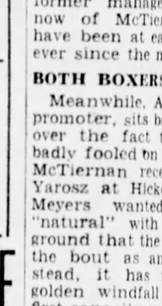
Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

WASHINGTON, July 20.—One of the most densely populated suburbs in America is second place in the National League. It practically contains the Cubs, Giants and Robins simultaneously and it is as much fun rubbing shoulders with that bunch as taking a porcupine to bed.



Nick Altrock

If the boys could only settle who's going to have second place then the others could go after the Cardinals. As things are now, you can't knock a flagpole sitter off his perch on the steeple when you're quarreling in the mezzanine.

That isn't a bad race Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth are staging, either, over who will be home run king and who will be the Prince of Wales.

M'GRAW TO APPEAL SUSPENSION BY HEYDLER

French Favored to Retain Davis Cup Against British Vanquishers of U. S. Team

GIANTS' CHIEF MAKES ISSUE OF CASE

ST. LOUIS, July 20.—(INS.)—John J. McGraw intends to carry his fight against the suspension of three days, slapped upon him by President John A. Heydler, to the last court of baseball.

Admitting that his suspension will have expired before any possible action can be taken, McGraw today said he intended to see that a manager and a club executive be granted the right of hearing by a league president before being suspended.

The New York Giants' manager was suspended for three days for using abusive language to Umpire Bob Clarke on Saturday.

DENOUNCES HEYDLER

It was the first time in 10 years that McGraw found himself ordered from officially directing his team from the bench. The last time McGraw drew a suspension was in 1921 in Pittsburgh.

Heydler arrived here yesterday morning from Cincinnati, and McGraw ran into him under the grandstand just before Saturday's doubleheader got under way.

McGraw loudly denounced the action of the league head for the suspension with the Giants battling to remain in the league race. He also denounced league umpires, many of whom he told Heydler were incompetent. McGraw referred to Clarke, Scott and Donnelly.

ACTION IS FORCED

Heydler did not reply to the New York manager. Later he said that much as he regretted his action there was nothing he could do except suspend McGraw after receiving a report from Umpire Clarke. He said Clarke had reported that McGraw had abused him excessively in his protest of a decision on Saturday.

DANIEL PRENN SUSPENDED

BERLIN, July 20.—(AP.)—Despite the appeal court's verdict exonerating Daniel Prenn, Tennis star, the German Tennis Association has suspended him for the season for "a breach of the amateur rules."

Eddie Edelman, an Eskimo, makes his local debut against Eddie Brannon, Negro lightweight, of the Hill, in the eight-round semi-final; Meyer Frager, formerly of Chicago, and Jimmy Dontella, of Johnstown, are in the second bout, and Carl Montebano, of Braddock, and Jack Kelly, of North Lima, O., are in the opener, at 8:45 daylight saving time.

Between Rounds

A card of seven four-rounders is listed at the Castle Bowl, New Castle, tonight. The club will resume regular shows with a 10-round windup two weeks hence.

Matchmaker Bill Dummer expects to close his two preliminaries today for his Willie Davies—Jimmy Thomas return bout at Hickey Park, Thursday night. He has Young Rudy, of Charleroi, and Ray Lyle, of Akron, welterweights, in the eight-round semi-final.

Bowl Boxers To Weigh In Ring

So many fans have asked to be permitted to see the weighing of Jimmy Belmont and Buck McTiernan for their "grudge" battle at the Meyers Bowl tonight that announcement was made this morning that they will be scaled in the ring instead of the office of the Bowl at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The office is not large enough to accommodate such a big throng.

Betting on the outcome has been brisk over the week-end. McTiernan has ruled a slight favorite in some of the wagering, but most of it has been at even money. Much of the betting has been on a knockout either way.

Frank Klaus, former middleweight champion of the world and manager of Belmont, said his protege is keyed to the highest pitch for the battle, and he expects him to win by a knockout.

"If McTiernan goes more than six rounds," he said, "you can attribute it to the fact that he has a good second in his corner in Johnny Ray. He will need good handling to pull through."

Klaus himself will act as Belmont's chief second.

GOLF DATE CHANGED

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 20.—The scheduled golf match of Gene Sarazen and Johnny Farrell, former national open champions, for the Summit Golf Club, July 25, has been changed and definitely set for Saturday, August 8.

SHIELDS, WOOD BATTERED TO DEFEAT

PARIS, July 20.—(AP.)—For the first time since 1919, the United States will be forced to stand by while the tennis stars of other nations fight it out in the Davis Cup challenge round.

Great Britain's brilliant youngsters, Henry W. (Bunny) Austin and Frederick J. Perry, swept Frank Shields and Sydney B. Wood off the court in Roland Garros stadium in the final two singles matches of the interzone final yesterday. Britain won the series three matches to two, and gained the right to battle France in the challenge round starting here Friday.

U. S. ELIMINATED

Trailing two matches to one going into the final day, Great Britain promptly tied the count when Perry blasted his way to victory through Wood, 6-3, 8-10, 6-3, 6-3, and left the whole issue up to Shields and Austin.

Shields started out with a bang to lead 5-2 only to hit a streak of erratic tennis and lose the first set, 8-6 and the next two and the match, 6-3, 7-5.

Wood's defeat by Perry had not been entirely unexpected, but Austin's straight set triumph over Shields left the crowd of 8,000 stunned. But the young British stylist deservedly won. He was much the steadier of the two, shields falling into repeated errors, especially in critical moments where they hurt most.

Shields beat the slight Briton at Wimbledon and there seemed to be no reason why he couldn't repeat.

FRENCH FAVORED

The British team will be underdogs in the series with France. Most tennis experts figured that America was equipped to give the French a better battle for the cup than the British. The apparent return to form of Henri Cochet has left France in an excellent position to gain the cup for the fifth successive year.

NO BROADCAST ON BIG BOUT

NEW YORK, July 20.—(INS.)—Advance sale of tickets for the Sharkey-Walker fight in Brooklyn Wednesday night was reported to be heavy today. Indications point to a near-capacity crowd and a possible gate of $300,000.

The fight will be staged about 9:30 p. m., eastern daylight time. Usually the main go does not get under way until 10 p. m., but the promoters have moved up the starting time of the Sharkey-Walker setto.

Promptly at 8:15 the preliminaries will start. The semi-final bout will be put on after the Sharkey-Walker fight.

The event will not be broadcast.

GEHRIG STEALS HOMER SHOW

Associated Press.

Now that Babe Ruth is not hitting home runs with quite the abandon of other days, Lou Gehrig is showing the customers what he can do along that line.

He was close to the whole show yesterday as the Yanks thumped the St. Louis Browns twice, 10 to 9 and 8 to 2. Going to bat seven times during the afternoon, he punched five hits, including his twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth homers of the year, and a triple. His three hits in the first game drove in seven runs and he propelled two more across in the nightcap. His two home runs put him five ahead of his closest rivals among the four-bagger specialists, Babe Ruth and Chuck Klein.

Jack Rothrock's single over Averill's head in the twelfth inning scored Warstler with the run that gave the Red Sox a 6-to-5 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The Senators picked up a half game on the idle Athletics by defeating Detroit, 2 to 1, in a pitchers' battle between Lloyd Brown and Art Herring.

John McGraw was forced to suffer from a distance as his New York Giants took a pair of 2-to-1 beatings from the St. Louis Cardinals and fell back into third place. The Giant leader was handed a three-day suspension for his run-in with Umpire Clarke on Saturday.

Brooklyn went back into second place by winning its second straight over the Chicago Cubs, 10 to 6. Led by Lefty O'Doul, who again cracked four hits in five attempts, the Robins fell on four Chicago pitchers for 17 hits.

Cincinnati and Philadelphia divided a double-header, the Reds scoring four times in the last of the ninth to take the first, 7 to 6, and the Phillies coming back behind Phil Collins' good pitching to win the second, 7 to 1.

ELEANOR HOLM SETS RECORD

NEW YORK, July 20.—(AP.)—Eleanor Holm, of the Women's Swimming Association of New York, bettered the best listed mark for the 50 meters backstroke swim at the Lido Country Club yesterday.

She was timed in 37 2-5 seconds, 1 3-5 seconds faster than the listed mark of 39 seconds set in 1925 by the late Sybil Bauer.

Helene Madison, of Seattle, who holds 15 of the 16 recognized world free-style marks, failed in an attempt to snare the sixteenth—that for the 1,000 meters.

Josephine McKim, of the Los Angeles A. C., won the 220-yard free-style race in 2:43 2-5.

Georgia Coleman, of the Los Angeles A. C., retained her National A. A. U. springboard fancy diving championship with a point score of 146.75.

CITY LEAGUE NINES CLASH TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

Going into the second week of the second half sandlot campaign, some hectic battles are carded. Two games are to be played in the City League and one in the West Penn which claim much attention.

Homewood goes to Olympia Park to clash with Jiggers Welsh's Book nine. Fans probably will see Carl Stewart and Roscoe in action.

Out Swissvale way, Reliance Life hooks up with Swissvale Community and Reliance has a tough battle ahead at the Church Street grounds. Haller probably will pitch. It is also Dutch Spencer's turn to hurl, but Gormley may be sent in.

The Steel City loop swings into action again this evening with the Pasquale club, of Oakland, traveling to Mifflin Township to open the second half race.

The Homestead Grays meet the Crafton-Ingram Church League All-stars at Crafton Field this evening.

One of the best games of the season was flashed at Garfield Park yesterday in the West Penn League, Eddie Imhoff and Tommy Gettings staging a pitchers' duel, each allowing four hits. The Martins lost to Linwood, 1 to 0.

In the only other league tilt played, Jena defeated Beechview 6-3, in the North-South circuit.

Iroquois, Carrick Eagles, Linden Grove, St. Clair Frogs, Grandview, Crawfords, Idlewood, Springdale and Tyson Aces also copped.

WAR DEBT PLAN OBSTRUCTIONS BAR RECOVERY

Mismanagement of German Finances Check Optimism; Need for Schacht Seen

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, July 20. — The "managed recovery" was checked again last week by further evidence of mismanagement in the international handling of German finances.

On second thought, after the strychnine effect of the moratorium gesture wore off, the market reflected recognition that the threatened bankruptcy of a leading country was nothing to whoop up optimism over. The acuteness of the situation and the involvements of other nations lend credence to the view that substantial private credits will be extended.

Mr. Rukeyser

Fundamentally, Germany is suffering from the fact that the precipitous drop in commodity prices since the Young plan was adopted raises the real burden of reparations by about 25 per cent. Furthermore, the German situation was further aggravated by the retardation, if not the actual cessation, in the import of capital. Behind all this was the pressure of the uneconomic Versailles peace treaty, and the persistence on the part of German neighbors of the punic spirits.

GERMANY WARNED

But an impartial observer recognizes that there was important financial mismanagement within Germany also. Germany was repeatedly warned in specific terms against financial mismanagement by Seymour Parker Gilbert, former agent general of reparations. In his final report more than a year ago, Gilbert, the youthful American expert, who was rewarded later with a blue ribbon of Wall Street, consisting of a partnership in the Morgan firm, admonished against the government's tendency to live beyond its income. He decided the lack of energy in controlling expenses.

A man, like Dr. Hialmar Schacht, retired head of the Reichsbank, seems to an outsider the fittest German to bring order out of chaos in German finances. As for outside creditors, they are in the same position as those waiting on a reorganization committee of a private corporation. It should be borne in mind that receivership certificates are usually investments of a very high grade.

JUNE FACTORY ACTIVITY OFF

NEW YORK, July 20. — Industrial activity in the United States in June fell 5 per cent from May and registered a 9.3 per cent decline from the level prevailing in June, 1930, according to Electrical World's monthly summary of electrical energy consumption in 3,800 manufacturing plants scattered throughout the country. Records of plant operations during the past eight years show an average drop of five points from the preceding month. The decrease this year is therefore ascribed entirely to usual seasonal changes in the several industries, but when seasonal adjustments are applied to the individual indices, industry is relatively on the identical level as in May.

Although current industrial activity is still abnormally low, comparison with the winter minimum shows more favorable conditions. The increase of 7.3 per cent over January exceeds that in any of the past six years, with the single exception of 1927, when the gain was 10.8 per cent. In 1929 the increase was only 6.1 per cent; in 1930 the June figure fell slightly below that for the lowest month of the preceding winter.

California Crude Oil Output Gains

LOS ANGELES, July 20.—California crude oil output in the week ended July 18 averaged 526,000 barrels daily, an increase of 3,300 barrels daily over the previous week, according to California Oil World.

British Rubber Stocks Decrease

LONDON, July 20.—Stocks of crude rubber here on July 18 totaled 81,766 tons, a decrease of 313 tons from the preceding week. Liverpool stocks totaled 54,697 tons, or an increase of 253 tons.

Agree to Curtail Crude Oil Yield

LOS ANGELES, July 20.—Ketteleman Hills operators have agreed to cut oil production to within the 60,000 barrels daily allowable.

Spectator

Food Stocks Outlook. Some Good, Some Poor. Parallels to 1873.

—By Wall Street Spectator—

NEW YORK, July 20.

PRODUCERS OF package goods, dairy products, biscuits and soft drinks will likely earn nearly as much this year as last, and in many instances there will be exceptional examples of income expansion, according to Standard Statistics, which has just completed a survey of the food products industry.

However, poor showings will be made by fruit and vegetable canning and bread baking concerns depressed by excessive production and competitive practices.

Influenced by the view that the best profit possibilities are obtainable in industries other than food during the major market upswing, this service recommends that new commitments in this field be concentrated in a few issues of outstanding importance.

Preference for moderate long-pull purchases is given to Borden, Hershey Chocolate, National Biscuit and Standard Brands.

IN THE OPINION of a highly regarded economic writer, the present depression is more legitimately comparable to the one following 1873 rather than 1921.

Similarities include:

(1) A major war—(1861-1864; 1914-1918).

(2) Industry readjustment and subsequent trade depression (1866; 1921).

(3) "New era" optimism—(1867-1873; 1923-1929).

(4) A stock market crash, in each case believed a technical reaction — (September, 1873; October, 1929).

Similar to the optimistic broadcasts evidenced in the closing months of 1929, leading financial journals and prominent government officials, following the 1873 market crash, reassured the public regarding basic soundness of the country's business, the high standard of living, and the wealth of the nation's resources.

Yet it was not until 1877, that business and industry could definitely be said to have turned the corner.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 20. — Sharp early downturns of corn prices today resulted from copious unexpected rains giving relief to crops in important sections. Wheat sympathized with corn, despite news of a tentative understanding between Germany and France. Opening 1¼@2⅛ cents off, corn later held near to the initial limits. Wheat started at ½ decline to ⅛ advance, and afterward sagged all around.

Blame Peso Drop On Gold Exports

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—(AP.)—Mexico exported $10,400,000 in gold to the United States in 1930 and more than $3,000,000 in gold during the first quarter of 1931, according to bank reports published today.

Continued exportation of gold is blamed in government financial circles for the decrease in the value of the silver peso, currently quoted at 35 per cent under the value of gold, compared to a normal difference of 3 per cent.

Thad Plans to Get Divorce And Marry Kitty

CHAPTER XXI.

"How can I be dragged into the Lawlor divorce scandal?" I asked Viola. At the same time the thought gave me an uneasy feeling, for I knew, and Viola knew, that I had witnessed a number of seeming indiscretions between Arline and Curt Lawlor, both before and after Arline had married Thad.

"I don't know why not," Viola answered; "there was the time we were at the Lawlor house party. That was before Arline Sargent married Thad Parsons, but that has nothing to do with Mrs. Lawlor's case against her husband. Remember how Arline and Lawlor were always mushing? Remember what we saw out in the rose arbor? And when we found them down on the private beach in the m°onlight—Baybee! I guess that wouldn't burn 'em up when it got in the papers!"

I didn't relish the idea of having to go into court to tell about that. I knew the game—photographers everywhere, pictures in the papers, ugly cross-questioning by Curt Lawlor's lawyers. I had read enough of such cases to visualize the whole thing.

"They can't drag me into it, can they, if I insist that I don't know a thing?"

"In a way they can summon you, or whatever it is, and at least make you get on the stand and take an oath that you never saw anything wrong."

SE[illegible]VERN

"[illegible] that," I said.

"Sure you can, and then if there if proof that you did see something—Zowie! Perjury!

"You should have been a lawyer," and I laughed, but it wasn't a very sincere laugh.

"A great many know that I used to go about with Thad. If I should testify against his wife they'd say I was doing it for revenge."

Viola agreed. She hadn't thought of it in that light.

Not long after this Mr. Malvern telephoned me.

"How about the little two-some, Katie?" he asked.

"It sounds good to me, but as I am due back on the job here at 10 tomorrow I have to be home by two at the latest, Mr. Malvern."

He agreed and was to call for me that night for a trip and a dinner.

When I was getting ready Viola remarked that she wasn't so keen for Forrest Malvern.

"I rather like him," I confessed, "he has such charming manners, distinguished and gay, and yet not so childish as the younger men."

"Maybe so, Katie, but the way he looks at a girl—you know."

"Most men do, and that complaint gives me an acute pain in the neck because most girls look at a man in the same way," I said, defensively.

"You are talking goofey," Viola declared.

"I am not. Every girl looks over the men she meets, sees how they measure up to the old Sheik standard, what sort of he men they look like and whether they have the personality called 'it'—now am I right?"

Viola laughed at this and agreed.

Mr. Malvern met me with his limousine and chauffeur.

"How about delicious chicken and mushrooms—with some real Jack Rose cocktails?" he asked.

"Splendid," I agreed.

COMPLIMENTED

We headed south and were soon tearing through the Holland Tunnel. The days were getting quite long and as we crossed the Jersey marshes there was a gorgeous sunset.

The place was up in the Orange Mountains.

Mr. Malvern was all that I had said of him, jolly and entertaining, and yet so distinguished looking that many a girl in the big place got a twist in her neck turning to stare at him. I was decidedly impressed.

We talked of so many things. He raved over my appearance at the fashion show and paid nice little compliments to me.

I tried to draw him out about Fanny Dutton, his gay little widow friend who was so much with him and who seemed so jealous of him.

"Oh, Fanny is a nice little scout," he said, "her husband was much older. He used to be the head of the General Utilities Corporation and when he died I took control of the concern."

That made me smile, for I wanted to say that the late Mr. Dutton's widow was trying to take control of Mr. Malvern.

"Tough for Thad Parsons—what the devil did he want to marry that girl for?" he asked.

I told him frankly enough, and I know that I shouldn't.

Mr. Malvern laughed unusually heartily.

"To think of a wise little boy like Thad falling for that stuff."

"When he told me about it I wanted to say just one word—boloney," I confessed, "but I wouldn't hurt him."

"He was devoted to you, Kitty." Mr. Malvern said it as though seeking information.

"We were the best of pals—that was all," I assured him.

"You and I will be the best of pals from now on—is it a go?"

"Why not?"

We shook hands on it.

On the way back I slept much of the way with my head against Forrest's shoulder. We had danced a great deal and I was tired. We had got to the point of calling each other Forrest and Katie—he had called me Katie long before but I got tired of the formal "Mr. Malvern" and began to use his first name, which seemed to delight him.

DIVORCE CASE NEAR

I wondered if he took me over there for fear we might run across Fanny Dutton in town. I wondered just what she was to him, anyway.

"Everything O. K.?" Viola asked as I tumbled into bed.

"Delightful," I assured her.

"In the woids of Avenue A, he was a perfect gent, eh?"

Viola could make a brass image giggle sometimes. I assured her that Forrest Malvern was just a perfect dear of a man.

"Perhaps I didn't guess right—I don't like that bird," she mumbled as she turned over to go to sleep again.

I wondered if Viola was just a little jealous.

During the weeks that followed I was out with Chubb Osmund a great deal and on many of the parties Forrest Malvern was with us, sometimes with Fanny Dutton. More often without her. On three different occasions he and I went out alone on little parties, once to visit some of his Long Island friends and twice up Westchester way. The more I was with Forrest Malvern the more he charmed me.

Unlike so many society women, according to the papers, Susie Lawlor didn't propose to go to Paris for a fashionable divorce. She wanted her divorce right away in New York courts.

"That made it tough for Thad, with his wife named as the chief cause of the troubles and sole grounds for divorce.

A little paragraph in one of the papers in connection with the case that was soon coming up read:

"Whether the Lawlor case has caused any rift between the co-respondent and her husband is not known, but for appearance sake, at least, they continue to occupy the Parsons home."

I had an uneasy feeling that either Susie Lawlor, herself, or her lawyer would come to me or send for me in connection with the case, but thus far there had been no word from them.

Viola and myself were settled down one evening for a restful time and a nice long sleep. We had been playing around at parties almost nightly for a week and needed the rest.

When our telephone bell jangled Viola, who happened to be crossing the room, went and picked it up.

"We're not going out tonight—that's flat," she said to me.

"You bet we're not going out—I wouldn't dress and go out for anyone tonight—not even the Prince of Wales," I answered.

THAD PROPOSES

Viola grinned and rather sharply she said, "Hello."

I was curled up in the big chair watching her. As she listened her eyes popped open and she clapped her hand over the transmitter.

"Ps-s-st!" she hissed. "It's Thad Parsons—he wants you!"

I can't explain it, but I uncurled myself and hopped out of the chair.

It was Thad, all right. He wanted to know if I would ride around the park with him for just half an hour; he had something to ask me.

I agreed and Viola helped me dress. Thad said the car would be waiting when I came down, and it was.

His chauffeur helped me in. Thad didn't get out. He apologized and explained that he wasn't taking any chances of gossiping busybodies seeing him with me.

As we drove through the park, he was silent at first and then he turned to me.

"I can trust you, Kitty, can't I?" he asked.

"As much as I can trust you."

"Ouch — I guess I deserved that one," he said, and then he began to talk.

"Of course, I shall divorce Arline, regardless of how the Lawlor case turns out."

If he expected any comment from me he was mistaken, and after a moment he went on.

"As soon as I divorce Arline, Kitty, we'll be married," he said, reaching for my hand.

DAILY SHORT STORY

A Pleasant Time

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Burglar Prevents Man From Killing Himself

There they were, those numerals, and as scarlet as His Majesty's troops on parade at Buckingham, for Batterson had suffered heavy losses.

Austin Batterson was a proud man.

That was why he had sent Shaw, his man-servant, out for the evening. Batterson had a businesslike blue-steel automatic in his table drawer and he intended to use it.

If it weren't for Fanny, his wife, and the two youngsters, he wouldn't have minded. He could face the world again and make another fortune. He had started at less than scratch and made good.

But what of Fanny and the youngsters? What would they do while he was starting over again?

Fanny was out West at her mother's at this time, with the two boys. She would expect a large check by the end of the week and Batterson had no funds.

That is, alive he had no funds. Dead, there would be $300,000 insurance.

And so that was the way to give the laugh to the army of numerals in the red that, from his books, brightly proclaimed his losses.

He had, in his calm-desperation, gone over, mentally, all of his assets—the little farm down on the Maryland coast—worth five thousand, perhaps. That wouldn't do. Then there were certain stocks—they had been thought to be conservative, safe, but now they were some 40 points less than he had paid for them and wouldn't bring him fifty thousand.

The knowledge of his heavy life insurance had been in the back of his head all the time.

BURNS PAPERS

Now he realized that here was something worth while, the answer to the problem. Gates, his lawyer, would be his executor, and Gates would put the whole in trust. It would keep Fanny comfortably, although not in luxury, and it would educate the boys.

And so he studied the figures again, copied from his books at the office. Then he went over, lighted the gas log. He watched the papers burn, the red numerals that flared his losses turned black with the charred paper and disappeared.

Batterson went back to his table and took the automatic from the drawer. He examined it with a practiced eye and made certain that it was loaded.

Very good. Yet, it took considerable courage. He had thought that it would be simple, but it wasn't so easy. The weapon felt like lead in his hand, and as cold as the chill of a dead man's hand.

Batterson, being human and healthy, and in the prime of matured manhood, shivered a little. He smiled at his own timidity and went out to the butler's pantry. There was some choice cognac there. A liberal drink would warm him, steady his hand.

TAKES THIRD DRINK

He took the drink and smiled a little, for this was the ancient formula—"Dutch courage." He had never thought he would need it.

He poured another drink.

Tiny beads clung to the rim of the glass, for it was very old cognac. The beads looked like little pearls.

Again he smiled.

This reminded him of the wife's pearls—left to her by her famous aristocratic grandmother and worth even more than his own life insurance policy.

But Austin Batterson never for a moment considered taking his wife's pearls, or even borrowing them or asking her to risk them. They were her heritage, part of her life. There were other jewels of Fanny's, upstairs in the cleverly hidden wall safe, altogether they might be worth half a million.

But they were Fanny's, not his. Only a few had he given her, the others she had inherited.

Batterson shook his head. Those jewels would save him—but he did not intend to be saved, that way.

And so he poured a third drink of the age-smooth but potent cognac and took it back to his library. He would toss it off and in the glow pick up that automatic and finish this grim business of making his life insurance collectable.

As he stepped from the dining-room a man was sitting at his desk. The man was sallow, grim, shabbily dressed, and he held Batterson's automatic in his hand.

"The idea is swell," the intruder said, "bringin' me a shot—the guy who owns this dump has good servants."

Batterson stood still and stared at the man. Then he tossed down the drink as the man cursed him vilely.

"What can I do for you?" Batterson asked, evenly.

"Oh, ho—so you're the Chief, himself, and not a servant. Well, that's good—you rich swells have no guts, but them servants can fight: I've mixed with 'em—and I've bumped some in my day."

"I asked you what I could do for you?" Batterson repeated.

"Yeah? Well, I heard you and don't high-hat me, there's plenty I can do for you."

Batterson was actually smiling.

He would resist this man and the man would shoot him—that was better than suicide—heroic and all that, and wouldn't shock Fanny so much: wouldn't make it painful for the boys to remember in later years.

"What, for instance, can you do for me?"

"Bump you — if you don't work fast and do as I say."

"Go ahead, I have no intention of doing as you say."

"Oh, yeah? Th' old bluff, eh? I ain't got time for bluffs. Your wife wears plenty of ice and stuff. I seen her comin' from th' opera an' from Gletmore's ball and I'd a got that stuff if I hadn't had to lay low when they was tryin' to give me th' rap. Now I'm gonna get it and do a lam, get me?"

"You are trying to say that you propose to steal my wife's jewels and leave the country."

"Tryin' to say it? I did say it. Aw, chop it, and march ahead to where th' ice and th' poils is and if you make a move to push a button or do any signalin' I'll blow you down with this swell little rod of yours and fix it so they'll think it's suicide—is that clear?"

Batterson nodded.

He had suddenly lost his peculiar sense of elation. The man was evidently right.

"Let us have a drink and discuss this," Batterson suggested.

The man grinned. He believed that he detected signs of fear in Batterson.

ROBBER SATISFIED

They went out to the butler's pantry and came back, Batterson with the decanter and another glass. He had held his own glass in his hand during all of this talk.

He poured a drink for the man who tossed it down and then smiled.

"Hot damn, it's th' goods," he murmured.

"The thing I want to discuss is this—if I refuse to hand over such of my wife's jewels as may not be in the bank vault, you will shoot me. The report of the shot will mean that you will have to—er—what was the word?"

"Lam, beat it, but you're goofy. I'll get th' ice first, you're alone here."

"Yes," Batterson said, suddenly, "you are right. Follow me."

He led the way up the wide stairway on into his wife's boudoir.

"Tell me where it's hid, don't try no monkey business."

"Slide that third panel to the left—see?"

The wall safe was revealed.

"All right, open it and be lively, I think I ought to plug you anyway so you can't recognize me again."

"Don't do that," Batterson said and he began to tremble.

He turned the knob to the memorized combination and opened the door, he reached in and took out the case of emerald bracelet and brooch first. His hand trembled more, his left hand, holding the case, as he handed it to this man.

The man sneered at him and then grinned as he took the case, which Batterson had snapped open. For a moment his eyes gleamed—

Something struck him.

It was Batterson's fist. Batterson stopped trembling, for it had merely been clever dissembling.

BATTERSON PROSPERS

The man went down. Batterson was on him in an instant and had the man's own automatic from his arm-pit holster in a flash. Batterson did not touch his own automatic and when the man revived he was looking into the steady barrel of his own weapon.

"Listen," Batterson said, "I am going to let you go, get up."

The man rose and hesitated, about to spring, but something in Batterson's, glinting eyes made him turn and go down.

At the front door Batterson kicked his vistor in the manner reminiscent of his college days kicking a goal, and the man rolled down the steps, scrambled up and ran into the shadows.

The police, being called, listened to Batterson's story of how he had been held up and robbed.

Fingerprints on the cognac glass were identified at headquarters, but Batterson's visitor had fled the city.

Within a year the loan Batterson got on the jewels had put him on his financial feet more solidly than ever, and it was an easy matter for him to reclaim these jewels and explain to Fanny how clever the detectives had been in recovering them.

"But, Austin, dear," Fanny said, "I shudder to think of the awful time you had with that burglar."

"Why, no," Batterson drawled, "really, Fanny, a pleasant time was had by all."

Dear Mr. Editor:

I have just been reading the paper about A. F. Muckle's former wife as she calls herself. She says she wants the world to know. Well, I want the world to know that it wasn't sweet milk she wanted, it was corn whisky, and as for the eggs I suppose she could have had them and if there wasn't enough she could lay some herself. Most old hens like her can. And about the underwear, this is the first we knowed about that part of it.

Well Mr. Editor there is a lot of other things I could say but I'll just save them for nexT time and tell the old gal they will be plenty hot.

The Exposition Lease

On the Surface It Looks as If the City Is Paying Out $30,000 a Year Unnecessarily.

Thanks to the zeal of a group of citizens who seek to show how municipal expenses can be cut and the tax burden reduced, an interesting situation relative to the old exposition grounds near the Point has been brought to light.

The city granted the land on March 3, 1886, free of all rental and city taxation for the period of 50 years, to the Western Pennsylvania Exposition Society. The ordinance provided, however, that in case the society should fail to hold a public exposition for three consecutive years the city should be entitled to reclaim the property, including buildings erected by the society.

The society held its last exposition in 1916. Three years later, on November 24, 1919, the city agreed by ordinance to lease the property from the exposition society for 20 years at an annual rental of $30,000.

The exposition society's activities were in the public interest. It was heavily in debt and the city undertook, by renting the property at $30,000 a year, to help the society pay its debts. While the purpose was laudable, it is not right that the taxpayers should be called upon to pay $30,000 a year for land that, apparently, is legally theirs under the original grant because of the society's failure to hold an exposition for three consecutive years.

The Way to Prosperity

Loan of $5,000,000,000 Will Finance Constructional Projects and Absorb Idle Man Power.

Popular confidence is a necessary prerequisite to any durable program of economic reconstruction.

The Hoover debt gesture temporarily swept away the fog of pessimism, but the popular doubts will recur unless leadership is ready and willing and courageous enough to attack the depression on all fronts.

Unless popular psychology is propped up by an economically sound plan for recovery, a swing-back in sentiment toward depression may be expected.

Disclosure of the acute financial status in Germany has in fact already tempered the enthusiasm over the moratorium gesture.

With depression still acute at home and with a third winter of great unemployment threatened, President Hoover should not remain adamant to the constructive and creative thinking which is going on around him.

Though certain reactionary business and banking executives may be cool to suggestions for thoroughgoing remedial measures, the scientific economists, experienced social workers and liberal-minded business men are clear in their minds as to proper procedure.

In informed quarters, the demand is growing for a vast prosperity loan, which will finance huge public constructional projects, and thus absorb the idle man power of the country.

The great deficiency in popular buying power, which is the current measure of the severity of hard times, springs largely from the far reaching slump in the construction industry.

With the outlook clouded, private initiative seems indisposed for the time being to carry on great construction projects.

Each individual is waiting for the other fellow to break the ice.

Meantime, the country suffers an irretrievable economic loss of immense proportions in the wasted productive power of unemployed men and machinery.

In human terms, the families of 6,000,000 unemployed and perhaps as many employed on a part time schedule are malnourished, and are suffering physical deterioration.

William Randolph Hearst has proposed that the federal government, whose financial prestige is the highest in the world, should mobilize its credit for the purpose of social reconstruction and the restoration of prosperity. Knowing that the operation must be of sufficient magnitude to be effective in turning the economic scales, the publisher suggested a loan of $5,000,000,000 for the financing of essential public works.

In commenting on this plan, I. M. Rubinow, well-known social worker and economist, suggested that the government supplement public work with loans to encourage private building of better houses.

"While many industries suffer from overproduction," Mr. Rubinow said, in a letter to the editor, "there is a crying need for better housing facilities. This need is not limited to a few cities or a part of the country. It is practically universal, surely, for all municipalities and even many smaller towns. Our housing conditions for a very substantial part of our population are atrocious. They are utterly out of harmony with the progress of sanitary science. Money spent for better housing is not wasted, need not become a burden upon the Treasury at all, because it is invested in income-bearing improvements.

". . . The nation can lend its credit to the state and municipalities. These minor political authorities may in turn lend it, if necessary, to individual property owners. With prices of material at their lowest, with cheap credit, and with a program of condemnation of slums, it should be possible to stimulate a tremendous amount of activity in the construction industry throughout the country. This credit might not only be low priced, but also long termed, with gradual amortization."

Of course, the details of spending the proceeds of the large prosperity loan must be worked out with the enthusiastic co-operation and support of the executive.

In his Palo Alto speech of acceptance, Mr. Hoover himself sketched an effective program of public works.

Before his election, he also held out the hope to the American people that the aim of business would be the ultimate abolition of poverty in the United States.

Conditions are now ripe for redeeming those pledges, and for carrying into execution those noble aspirations.

Effective plans cannot be formulated overnight.

Much valuable time has already been lost.

If these constructive influences are to be released in time to mitigate unemployment distress next winter, President Hoover must move decisively at this time.

The President has an excellent opportunity to call Congress into special session now to act on the proposed program for social amelioration and for the return of normal economic conditions.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Why Blame the Men?

"Men don't want to marry. Men don't take women seriously any more. Men do not want to take the responsibility of supporting a wife and family. No man wants to tie himself down to one woman." So declare the theorists.

* * *

True or untrue—WHY BLAME THE MEN?

A woman cannot change a man. But women can get, and have always gotten, anything they want and demand from men. Just as they got the ballot and their freedom. Just as they got political jobs and pajamas and economic independence and cigarets and seats in Congress.

* * *

* * *

She wants EVERYTHING! She wants to be free and independent and efficient—and then she wails to heaven because men no longer "cherish" her and work for her and "take care of her."

* * *

A man is just as good as woman demands he shall be—and just as bad as she permits him to be.

* * *

Men take women just as seriously as women demand to be taken, and just as casually and indifferently as women allow themselves to be taken.

* * *

Men never have been what women wanted them to be—but they have always given woman everything she wanted and insisted on HAVING.

If women want jobs and independence and whoopee and free kissing—they've already got them. So why wail because they can't have the old-fashioned things, like permanent marriage and masculine devotion and a nice soft spot to curl up in without the trouble of working for a living?

* * *

Why SHOULD a man want to marry, when he can get all the feminine attention and caresses he wants without marrying? Why should a man stick to any one woman when the world is full of women all waiting to make a pet of him? Why should he take woman seriously when she permits him to take her as an amusing little pastime?

* * *

The truth is that women don't know WHICH they want—jobs or husbands, freedom or ease, real love or synthetic kisses. What they seem to want is not only to have their cake and eat it, too—but to find two or three kinds of cake in one pan!

You just can't SATISFY a woman!

FRANCE DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS, July 20.—The spirit of Paris still burns high and clear. As it has hidden its deprivations and heartbreaks through the years, so has it hidden its present economic halt. Motoring into its fruitful chaos this morning, it seemed as gay and effervescent as ever, the same bewitching Siren of the Seine.

Of all the cities on the globe, Paris has the most amazing vitality. The boulevards that now hum with life and physical beauty have often run red with the blood of martyrs. In all famine has stalked and pestilence raged. But always Paris rebounds—smiling, bowing and gloriously enchanting.

As filled as it is with its banalities and frivolities, one always feels that swift undercurrent of sturdiness — the sturdiness that has made it the most compelling city of the old world. Sentimentalists may feel eternally the throb of its historic past, the obvious increment to its inspiring dead.

I thought of this today as, clogged in the traffic, we moved slowly down the narrow rue St. Honore. Here Robespierre lived, there Moliere was born and yonder the bustling department store on whose site The Three Musketeers once dwelt. A block away Marie Antoinette, riding to doom in a tumbril, was spat upon by a mob.

The completeness of the hotel concierge spying system here is a phenomenon that baffles us all. I wanted to get in touch with Raymond Mayditch, a Russian chauffeur, who drove us through Belgium, Holland and Germany, last summer. Also with a Madam Ranck who served as a maid during our stay at another hotel.

The only clues I had to their whereabouts were their mere names. But nothing is hopeless for your concierge. Out of the millions in Paris, it was hunting the proverbial needle. In a half hour Raymond with his car was at the hotel door and Madam Ranck, we learned, was with the Adolph Menjous in Hollywood.

The view from my hotel window looks down upon an al fresco tea garden with tables topped by gay umbrellas, all under leafy chestnut trees. In the graveled center a fountain softly pulses. An orchestra plays a haunting murmurous melody. Yet somehow I think of the harsh claxoning hub-bub of New York a trifle longingly.

Americans are usually insomniacs during the first few days in Paree. The six hours difference in time causes the sleeplessness. I spoke of this difficulty to a fellow American this morning. "I know of no place," he said "where I would rather suffer insomnia." And added ungraciously: "Only a sap tries to sleep here." I never thought of that.

This afternoon I browsed among second hand book-stalls that line the Seine wall along the Quai Voltaire and turned into the milling book-sellers' Street-of-the-Holy Fathers. Afterward, with no objective, I came upon a maze of filthy twisting little streets, topsy turvy with mean drinking dens and a blur of evil faces. I don't imagine I was in any particular danger, yet the hair on Billy's back constantly bristled, and such is the contagion of fear I felt my heart pumping. It suddenly came upon me I had lost direction, so I inquired of a baggy corduroyed Villon type the way to the Chamber of Deputies, which I knew was in the neighborhood. He shrugged sullenly and turned away. Fortunately a few steps more and I turned into the more respectable Place St. Michel. And the way I grabbed a mouse-powered taxi and scooted for the Right Bank, tout suite, was even sweeter than tooter.

The big exposition out Vincennes way has, of course, filled Paris hotels temporarily and tomorrow they inaugurate a new president. And, naturally, before I depart a cabinet will fall. I've never been here without a cabinet crashing. About two days after I arrive the cabinet meets and someone screams through his whiskers: "Old Mons. McIntyre is in town. Let's give him a tumble." And they allay-oop.

* * *

Clement, a head waiter at the Ritz, whose white beard is a perfect thinly coiled mustache, tapped at the door just now. He inquired to know if the crossing was smooth and if we were happy. He was at entire command now and forever. During our stay, his life was ours. Of course, it is apple sauce. But it is Paris, the sketchy, surface Paris that's one per cent sincere and 99 per cent polite graft. And most of us love it.

It was a thrill to talk to my mother-in-law in New York this evening on the telephone and tell of our safe arrival. In exactly 37 minutes the connection was established. That is 37 minutes after I got the local operator. That takes about an hour. Paree! Paree! Oo la la!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Queer, how wives complain about careless husbands—

How mad they get if John forgets to bring home the beefsteak, or wants a night off with the boys.

How sorry they feel for themselves because they've given "the best years of their life to the brute——"

Don't they ever remember that marriage is a woman's game . . . that matrimony, like olives, is an acquired taste for males? No, they don't. Practically all wives suffer from the delusion that women do men an enormous favor when they marry them . . . for which favor men should grovel gratefully until death. But nothing could be further from the truth! Every normal woman wants marriage and is never satisfied until, by hook or crook, she has achieved it. And men, instead of seeking matrimony, is the reluctant sex.

Marriage has countless advantages for the woman. It releases her from the horrid job of earning her own living, particularly in her old age. It gives her opportunity to have children respectably, and affords protection for those children. It gives her a certain social status, which is as important to Miss 1931 as it was to her great-great-grandmother. And, above all, it enables her to possess Things. Houses. Gardens. Cars. And to fill said houses with countless beruffled and embroidered dingbats which Dad is forbidden to touch on penalty of separate maintenance. So marriage is a great game for women. Even marriage to an uncongenial man is better than no marriage at all.

But these arguments do not apply to men. Many men are proud of their homes and like to be husbands but it isn't a natural knack. Male humans aren't born with a yen for nests any more than male robins. They acquire nests and have nests thrust upon them, but they can do quite nicely without them.

SENTIMENTAL THEORY TO THE CONTRARY, A MAN SACRIFICES MORE THAN A WOMAN WHEN HE MARRIES AND, IN MANY CASES, GETS FAR LESS IN RETURN.

A man does not need marriage to protect his old age, preserve his reputation or provide him with female companionship. Marriage multiplies a man's financial responsibility, raises Cain with his liberty and interferes frightfully with his personal habits and comfort.

Much is said about the benefits of a "woman's touch around the home" and, to hear the girls tell it, a man can't be too thankful for that touch. But, actually, there's nothing a man desires less or gets rid of quicker, if he gets a chance. The average home is run BY women FOR women. It is 100 per cent female from the glass orchid in the reception hall to the embroidered guest towel in the bathroom.

Marriage, that supreme convenience for woman, is about the most inconvenient thing that can happen to a man. All of which it might be well for certain ladies to remember.

Text For Today Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.—John, xvii:20, 21.

The Human Face

And Its Marvelous Expressions of Power.

PHOTOGRAPHED BY HIMSELF, FALLING THROUGH SPACE

For the first time, since the world and flying began, a man, flying through space with a parachute has actually photographed himself, on the way down. The men in these pictures are Herr Willi Ruge and Herr Boettcher, German fliers and parachute jumpers. Fliers are interested in the fact that it was possible for these men, leaping from an airplane far above the earth, to take photographs of themselves as they dropped.

Herr Willi Ruge said: "The small cameras work almost automatically. We only had to wind up the spring and start the cameras shortly before we jumped. The mechanism was geared down to expose one photograph per second. The cameras were hooked to our main body-belt, to take photographs of the expression of my face, during the first, decisive second, I pointed the lens upward. After our parachute had unfolded, we were also able to operate the cameras by hand, so that we could take photographs in all directions."

Millions that do not fly will be interested in these pictures,

The upper picture shows Herr Boettcher, as he photographed himself, falling through the air, before his parachute had unfolded and checked his descent.

The second picture shows Herr Willi Ruge, as he fell to the earth, head first, just after his dive from the airplane into space. It must have taken presence of mind to photograph his own face as he fell earthward, in this position.

The third picture from the top shows Herr Ruge, just as he felt the jerk from the parachute. He said, afterwards:

"It seemed as if some ruffian had grabbed me by the collar of my coat and lifted me up; this was the decisive moment, because the pull showed that the parachute had unfolded, and the braking action begun."

That jerk of the parachute meant safety.

It takes courage, nerve, skill to perform these jumps, and take photographs of yourself while you are doing it.

There are millions of men ready for such efforts, and capable of it. These flying possibilities will be deadly in future wars, if we must have them. They will be useful through thousands of years of peace, when war will have been forgotten.
